CHOLERA VICTIM DIES AFTER ARRIVAL

Three Days After Reception at Swinburne Island as a Suspected Case.

MORE RIGID PRECAUTIONS

Three Ships Detained—Possible Case on the Sant' Anna Ended Fatally at Sea—Conference To-day.

After holding three transatlantic liners containing altogether 636 cabin and 2,616 steerage passengers in Quarantine for the most rigid observation, Dr. Alvah H. Doty, Health Officer of the Port of New York, gave out a statement last night admitting that cholera cases had reached this port, and that one suspect who arrived on Sept. 26 died three days later on Swinburne Island of the disease.

The three vessels held, the Fabre liner Sant' Anna, making her second trip to this port; the Hamburg-American liner Moltke, and the steamer Virginia, have all touched cholera-infected ports in Southern Europe. On the Sant' Anna a man in the steerage died on the way over, and Dr. Doty says that the history of the case clearly indicates that he died of cholera. On the vessel there are at present two other cases of intestinal illness.

In the Sant' Anna's cabin are 224 men and women, whose friends are anxiously awaiting word from them. In her steerage are 1,072 persons, mostly foreigners. The two sick steerage passengers are quarantined and under observation by Dr. Doty. There is no indication as to when the ship will be released. The man who died on the voyage was buried at sea. He died on Sept. 25.

As to the other two ships detained for precaution, the Virginia sailed from Genoa on Sept. 19, and Naples Sept. 20. In her cabin are only 21 persons, but in the steerage are 556. The Moltke carries nearly 1,400 passengers, 391 in her cabin and 988 in the steerage. Both the Moltke and the Sant' Anna arrived on Monday and friends of those on board expected them at the pier on Monday afternoon. The Virginia arrived yesterday.

After announcing his decision to detain the three ships, Dr. Doty said he would confer to-day with Dr. Walter Weyman, Surgeon General of the United States Marine Hospital Service, to map out a campaign of protection for the port.

Dr. Doty's statement, issued after the order detaining the vessels, revealed for the first time the death of the steerage passenger removed from the steamship Germania on Sept. 26 as a "suspicious case."

As to the death on the Sant' Anna, the ship's surgeons presented a report of the death in the steerage caused by gastro-intestinal affection. The victim died within three days. Dr. Doty said:

"The history of this case indicates very clearly that the man died of cholera. No other cases have developed on the voyage, but there are two cases of intestinal trouble among the steerage passengers at present. Cultures have been taken in these cases and the bacteriological examination thus far shows no evidence of cholera.

"The final result will be ready to-morrow morning. The inspection and examination of the Sant' Anna show that everything has been done on shipboard to prevent the spread of the disease.

"The Moltke," continued Dr. Doty, "has on board one suspicious case, a steerage passenger; but no action will be taken with the vessel until the result of the bacteriological examination is known. The Sant' Anna is regarded as a possible 'cholera carrier,' and in any event passengers who have been exposed to the patients will be transferred to Hoffman Island.

"On Sept. 26 the steamer Germania arrived from Marseilles and Naples. On boarding the steamer I found an unusually good medical report. The affidavit of the master and surgeon showed no deaths in transit, no cases of infectious disease, and no suspicious cases; in fact, there was no case of any nature in the ship's hospital, and a special report by the surgeon showed that there were no intestinal troubles.

"But for the last three or four months, as an extreme precaution, I have had removed from all steamers from Mediterranean ports all steerage passengers who have applied for treatment on the voyage in order that obscure or irregular cases of cholera may be detected.

"Six of the passengers on the Germania, who were reported on the surgeon's journal as having applied for treatment for minor troubles but were well on arrival, were removed to Swinburne Island. Two days later one of this group, Maozain Scobain, aged 28 years, a Greek, was given treatment. Twenty-four hours later the patient was in a condition of collapse and died in twelve hours.

"Although the autopsy showed no evidence of cholera, the examination of the secretions of the intestinal tract showed the presence of suspicious organisms. Specimens were sent to Dr. W. H. Park of the Health Department of this city, and to Dr. Anderson, the bacteriologist of the United States Marine Hospital Service. The results were presented to me yesterday afternoon and indicated that the patient died of cholera.

"This is a practical demonstration of what is known as 'cholera carrier'; that is, persons who may carry organisms of the disease without any symptoms to indicate its presence. In this case it was demonstrated that the extreme precautions were fully justified. As the Germania case gave practical proof of 'cholera carriers,' it indicates that in the future additional measures must be put in force."

More than a dozen steamships have been held up recently because of the cholera in Europe, but all except the three now under inspection were allowed to dock after a rigorous examination.

Marooned on the Sant' Anna are, among other American tourists, the Rev. David J. Burrell of the Marble Collegiate Church, this city, and the Mills family of Washington, returning from an extensive European automobile tour.

The Moltke, a Hamburg-American liner, has 391 cabin passengers and 988 in the steerage; the Virginia has 21 in the cabin and 556 in the steerage. Personal inspection of this long list kept the health authorities busy from early morning until last night. Those in the steerage who were exposed to danger on the Sant' Anna will be sent to Hoffman Island, and similar precautions will be taken in the case of the suspicious illness on the Moltke. Those not exposed will probably be allowed to land to-morrow.

All day yesterday the work of inspecting passengers and members of the crew of the three detained vessels went on. Men under Dr. Doty's charge were busy fumigating the ships and the clothing of steerage passengers as well.

While this was going on down the bay the telephone operator at Quarantine was kept busy by friends of the detained passengers, who wanted to know why the vessels did not come to their piers, and asking how soon they might be expected. The telephone operator could tell them nothing, for Dr. Doty's announcement that evidences of cholera had been found

RED EAGLE FOR DR. BUTLER.

Kaiser Gives President of Columbia One of Highest German Honors.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Emperor William has conferred a distinguished honor on President Butler of Columbia University by decorating him with the First Class of the Order of the Red Eagle, with the Star.

This, after the Black Eagle, is the highest decoration within the Emperor's gift. It has been awarded to Dr. Butler for his services in connection with the Roosevelt chair at the University of Berlin, established five years ago by James Speyer as a corollary to the Kaiser Wilhelm chair.

President Butler particularly ingratiated himself in exalted quarters in Germany last year by his speech at the Lake Mohonk Conference. On that occasion he referred to international politics and eloquently ridiculed Great Britain's fears in regard to the "German peril." He charged England with the principal responsibility for danger to the world's peace in as far as it is menaced by Anglo-German tension over naval rivalry.

JUSTICE MOODY RESIGNS.

Will Retire on Nov. 20 with Full Pay —President Visits Him.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 4.—President Taft has received the resignation of William H. Moody of Massachusetts as a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, to take effect on Nov. 20. He has written to Justice Moody accepting his resignation as of that date, which is three days in advance of the limitation set by the special act Congress passed at its last session.

It has been known for some time that Justice Moody would retire, and thus enable the President to name a member of the court in his place. He would have written the President earlier but for the fact that the President has had no intention of filling the vacancy during the recess of Congress and would not make an appointment of that importance till the Senate was in session to confirm it.

The President has made two or three calls on Justice Moody at Magnolia during the Summer, and visited him again this afternoon. The two have had a complete understanding about the resignation for some time. The President and Mr. Moody were colleagues in Roosevelt's Cabinet. In accepting the resignation the President expresses his high regard for Justice Moody's abilities and emphasizes his regret that serious illness has made his retirement necessary.

Justice Moody's successor will not be announced until some time late in November.

SHOOTS HERSELF IN STREET.

Unidentified Woman Seen Weeping Before Taking Her Life.

In sight of hundreds who were hurrying home from work last evening a woman, dressed in black, shot herself at Livingston Place and East Fifteenth Street. She died almost instantly.

The woman was first observed turning from Second Avenue into Fifteenth Street. Two small boys, Joseph Piccaca of 507 East Fifteenth Street and John Kinzelberg of 277 First Avenue, saw her lean against the railing around Stuyvesant Park weeping bitterly. The boys watched her curiously, and evidently noticing she was attracting attention the woman continued her walk along Fifteenth Street still crying.

When she reached Livingston Place she pulled a new revolver from the inside of her coat, and, putting it to her side, fired one shot before any of the passersby could stop her.

William D. McDonald, a restaurant manager of 19 West 107th Street, ran to the woman who had fallen to the street. He picked her up just as Patrolman Dondero of the East Twenty-second Street Police Station, who had heard the shot while doing duty in Stuyvesant Park, came up. The two carried her into the New York Infirmary for Women and Children at the corner of Livingston Place and Fifteenth Street, but she died before the doctors arrived.

The woman was about 35 years old, weighed 145 pounds, and had dark-brown hair and eyes. There was nothing in her clothing to identify her.

REJOICING OVER THE MAYOR.

5,000 Persons Cheer Him at City Hall —Aldermen Win a Compliment.

When Mayor Gaynor left City Hall at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon after a long day's work at his desk, he was cheered by a crowd of fully 5,000 persons who had gathered about the front of the building to see him come out. The attention of the crowd about City Hall Park was first attracted by the arrival in the open plaza of the Mayor's automobile about 3:30 o'clock. He had intended to leave early, not wishing to overtax his strength, but there were so many things to attend to in the afternoon that he could not get away until an hour later.

Mrs. Gaynor came over to accompany the Mayor home. As they walked down the steps to the waiting automobile the crowd cheered enthusiastically. The Mayor doffed his tall hat and bowed. Then as the automobile started, the crowd pressed in around it to get a better look at the Mayor, who had came back from death's door. Despite the police they got so close that it was with difficulty that a narrow lane could be cleared for the machine to pass through to Park Row. A crowd of boys followed the car with shouting as far as the bridge entrance.

HUGHES RETIRES THIS WEEK.

Governor Had Expected to Resign To-day, but Pressure of Business Prevents ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Gov. Charles E. Hughes will retire this week to assume his new duties as a member of the United States Supreme Court. Because of pressure of business he will not resign to-morrow, as was expected. The time has not been set for the taking of the oath by Lieut. Gov. Horace White, who will succeed to the Governorship, serving until Jan. 1 next.

State Health Commissioner Eugene H. Porter, Homer Folks, and Dr. Simon Flexner of New York led a delegation, largely representing the State Charities Aid Association, which called upon Gov. Hughes to-day to thank him for his work in aid of the campaign to stamp out tuberculosis.

SOUGHT GAMBLERS IN ARMY BUILDING

Mayor Gaynor Apologizes for Police Commissioner's Observance of Acting Mayor's Order.

NO REPROOF FOR BAKER YET

Mayor Hasn't Even Read Mr. Mitchel's Report Against the Commissioner—Complaint to Grand Jury Next.

Developments in the fight begun by President Mitchel when Acting Mayor for the removal of Police Commissioner Baker came thick and fast yesterday. One which caused a buzz of conversation about the City Hall was a letter written by Mayor Gaynor to Lieut. Col. M. Gray Zalinski, Deputy Quartermaster, U. S. A., expressing regret, as the Mayor expressed it, "that the Police Commissioner, acting under the direct order of Acting Mayor Mitchel to do so," had served notice on Col. Zalinski, in his official capacity, that the United States Army Building, at the corner of Whitehall and Pearl Streets, was harboring a gambling house.

The Mayor explained in his letter that a mistake had been made. He added that a similar mistake had been made in the case of 106 Morton Street, which is the United States Appraiser's Stores.

The letter, made public late yesterday afternoon, was the first intimation that the energies of the police had been directed toward two Federal buildings in search of gamblers. Here is the letter:

> Office of the Mayor, Oct. 4, 1910.
> Sir: I am in receipt of your communication showing that the Police Commissioner, acting under the direct order of Acting Mayor Mitchel to do so, served notice on you in your official capacity that the United States Army Building, at the southeast corner of Whitehall and Pearl Streets, was being conducted as a gambling house, and calling on me for any evidence there may be to substantiate that statement. I beg to say that there is no such evidence, and to express my deep regret that such an insulting notice should have been served on a United States Government official. May I say also that I equally regret the similar occurence in the case of 106 Morton Street, which is the United States Appraiser's Stores building? Very truly yours,
>
> W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.
> Lieut. Col. M. Gray Zalinski, Deputy Quartermaster.

In making public this letter Mayor Gaynor's secretary, Robert Adamson, neglected to hand out a copy of Col. Zalinski's letter to the Mayor, which was the first word Mayor Gaynor received that the police had been troubling the officials of the Army Building.

Explained by an Army Man.

An official of the Army Building was found at the Army and Navy Club last night and he explained the peculiar affair. This army official, who requested not to be quoted by name, said: "Nearly a month ago the office of the Deputy Quartermaster was visited by two plain clothes detectives, who said that they had orders to investigate a complaint that gambling was going on in the building. Col. Zalinski called in Major Schofield, who has charge of the building, and asked what were the grounds of complaint. Major Schofield knew of none. The detectives were told to make a thorough inspection of the building. They looked embarrassed and said they would go back for further instructions.

"Next day a letter was received by Col. Zalinski from the Police Lieutenant of the district, reiterating the statement that the building had been reported as accommodating gamblers, and asked that any such tenants be evicted at once. Just at this time Col. Zalinski went to Fort Ethan Allen. While he was gone the Police Lieutenant called upon Major Schofield.

"Upon Col. Zalinski's return he wrote to the Police Lieutenant, who replied by letter that the matter had been referred to the Police Commissioner. Col. Zalinski placed an indorsement on that letter and forwarded it to Commissioner Baker.

"Commissioner Baker's reply was that he was acting under orders given him by Acting Mayor Mitchel in investigating the report that gambling was going on in the Army Building. This letter from the Commissioner, together with one from Col. Zalinski asking the Mayor to make an investigation, was sent to the Mayor marked 'personal' a few days ago.

"And now comes a possible solution of the strange report. Employes in the Army Building say that a gambling house existed until recently over a saloon just across the street. It has been suggested by one who thinks he knows the police situation that the visit of the two plain clothes men to the Army Building might have been to tip off the gamblers over the saloon opposite that an investigation was under way."

Mitchel Doesn't Recollect It.

Mayor Gaynor's letter to Col. Zalinski was read to Mr. Mitchel last night. "I suppose that is another thing Commissioner Baker has done contrary to orders," said Mr. Mitchel. "But until I have had time to make a thorough investigation I cannot comment on the letter further than to say that at present I have no recollection of either of those two buildings mentioned having been reported as harboring gambling resorts. I will look thoroughly into the matter to-morrow, and perhaps will then have something to say."

More fuel in the Baker-Mitchel controversy was added by a statement from Mayor Gaynor that he had not asked Mr. Mitchel to file the report with him setting forth his side of the dispute with Commissioner Baker and had not read the report. This report, which was published in yesterday's TIMES, accused the Police Commissioner of having disobeyed orders and of having made false statements. It also requested the Police Commissioner's removal.

It was in reply to a question from newspaper writers as to whether he had any comment to make on Mr. Mitchel's report that Mayor Gaynor said this:

"Nothing. The least said the easiest mended. Did you ever hear that? I did not ask for it and have not had time to read it. Let me hope that this city, as orderly a city as there is in the world, will never be held up by any persons or newspapers as the mere refuge and home of unfortunate women and gamblers. Let us all proceed in an orderly and lawful way, which is the only effective way, and without scandalizing the city, to minimize these vices, which, like all other vices, will always exist. I had planned to that end, and hope the plan may still be effective."

Up in the Board of Aldermen.

Another development of the day was the carrying of the fight against the Baker administration of the Police Department to the Board of Aldermen. A resolution was introduced by Alderman Ralph Folks of the Thirtieth Assembly District calling for the appointment of a committee of seven members of the board to investigate gambling and vice in the city.

Alderman Folks's resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules without discussion. There is not likely to be

37 DEAD, MANY HURT, IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

Big Electric Cars Meet on a Curve in Illinois and Excursionists Are Killed.

CREW DISOBEYED ORDERS

Waited for Only One Section of a Special Train—Three Railroad Officers Among the Victims.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 4.—In a head-on collision on a sharp curve near Staunton between two big electric cars at 3:38 o'clock this afternoon at least thirty-seven persons were killed and about a score were injured. Neglect of trainmen to understand and obey orders is believed to have caused the disaster.

THE DEAD.

The known dead are:

BERRY, J. E., Springfield, Ill.; Land Commissioner for the Illinois Traction system.
STREET, W. W., Staunton, Ill.; assistant trainmaster of the traction system.
BLACK, D. V., Springfield; Assistant Superintendent of motive power and equipment of the traction system.
HABBEGGER, J. R., Jamestown, Ill.; merchant.
PRICE, A., Auditor of traction system.
WERNER, C., Chapin, Ill.
BAUER, HERMAN, carpenter, St. Louis.
KIRWIN, T. J., salesman, St. Louis.
INDERMILL, MANUEL A., Baden, Ill.; insurance agent.
GALLOWAY, Dr. H. C., Decatur, Ill.
SCHAEFFER, J. G., St. Louis.
McCLOUD, Mrs. WILLIAM, Bendl, Ill.
HILL, S. C., Princeton, Ind.; railway trainman.
BLOCKTNA, JOHN, Bendl; teamster.
BLOCKTNA, Mrs. JOHN, Bendl.
RENSHAW, Dr. B. F., Curran, Ill.
ROBINSON, H. B., Bendl; miner.
ROBINSON, Mrs. H. B., Bendl.
ROSE, E. M., Chicago; collector Collier's Weekly.

The collision occurred between a local electric car northbound and an excursion car loaded with passengers on their way to view the parade of the Veiled Prophet at St. Louis. The local car bore many passengers bound for the State fair at Springfield.

The accident, according to present information, was due to the disregard of orders by the crew of the local, which was in charge of M. A. Leonard, conductor, with John Lierman of Staunton as motorman. They had orders to pass the excursion car at Staunton. This train was running in two sections, and it is declared the orders were for the local to wait for both sections. The first section passed and the local pulled out on the main track and sped north.

At a sharp turn, called Dickerson's Curve, two miles north of Staunton, the cars came together in a splintering crash. The curve is at the bottom of a decline in both directions. Both cars were on the down grade and moving at a speed of more than forty miles an hour when they met, right at the bottom of the double incline and at the sharpest part of the curve.

The crews of both cars, that of the special, composed of W. V. Duncan, conductor and E. J. Young, motorman, both of Springfield, leaped as soon as they saw the collision was coming, and all four men escaped without serious injury. They were badly shaken up but were able to lend assistance to the injured. None of the passengers had a chance for safety as the crash came immediately after the cries of warning from the conductors and motormen as they jumped.

The cars came together with a terrific crash, and both were demolished and piled in one huge mass of wreckage, through which the bodies of the dead and wounded were scattered. The wreckage was so closely twisted together that it was a marvel that anybody escaped death. The cars were not only telescoped but they were actually battered out of all semblance to their original shape. They were simply a mass of splintered wood and steel twenty feet high.

The local car rode up on to the stauncher and heavier excursion car and telescoped it, literally shearing off its upper portion as though it had been sawed to the level of the floor, and carried the wreckage back half the length of the big car. On it not one escaped uninjured.

Within a few minutes farmers from the surrounding country and many men of Staunton were on the way to the scene of the accident to render assistance. They worked with desperate haste, and in a short time had taken from the wreckage all of the living.

Word of the accident was telephoned to Springfield and Peoria and special cars were rushed from these points. Other cars also were sent north from Granite City, Ill. These last took many of the injured and hurried them back to Granite City, where they were placed in hospitals. As fast as the dead were extricated they were placed in one of the cars sent from Springfield. In a short time a car containing twenty-eight bodies was sent to Carlinville.

General Manager Chubbuck of the traction company was in Peoria when the news of the wreck was received. Accompanied by minor officials, he started at once for the scene. At Springfield all of the available physicians were placed on Chubbuck's train and hurried to Staunton.

Mr. Chubbuck just before leaving Springfield said: "The reports from the wreck are very meagre and unsatisfactory up to the present time. The best information I have shows that thirty-seven have been killed and that twenty-eight of the dead are now at Carlinville. I have received various estimates of the number of wounded, ranging from sixteen to fifty, but I feel assured that the list of injured will be nearer the smaller figure. I am unable to discuss the cause of the wreck at the present time, as I have received no authentic information regarding it."

ARRESTED IN FIFTH AVENUE.

Woman Accuses a Broker of Misappropriating Her Money.

A man who is said to be a broker, but who refused to give any further information except that he was "John Doe," was arrested at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-second Street last night on complaint of Mrs. Pauline Goldfarb, who keeps a hairdressing establishment at 136 West 116th Street. She says she gave him $1,500 between Aug. 6 and Sept. 6, 1907, to invest in stocks which he appropriated to his own use.

Mrs. Goldfarb in the new West Twentieth Street Station said that she met the man in the street for the first time in a year. She knew him as Ed Hallan.

OIL CONCERNS FIGHT FOR WORLD'S TRADE

Great Battle Is On Between the Standard and the Shell and Allied Companies.

OIL IS BEING SENT HERE

Standard Selling Without Profit in India—Sharp Drop in Shell Shares on London Stock Exchange.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Keen interest is taken in London in the great war which has been begun between the Standard Oil Company and the Shell Trading and Transport Company for the control of the world's petroleum trade.

While the Standard's capital is given as $300,000,000, the Shell Company, of which Sir Marcus Samuel is Chairman, and its allied concerns are said to represent a capital of $200,000,000. The Shell Company is quite confident of its ability to beat the American trust and is already attacking the Standard on the latter's own ground by sending large consignments of oil to the United States.

Since the battle began the price of petrol in this country has gone down 7 cents a gallon.

Members of the Shell group, which includes the Royal Dutch Company and the Asiatic Company, assert that in the petrol trade of Europe the proportion of the Shell's business is 65 per cent. to the Standard's 35 per cent., but that the Standard does perhaps 65 per cent. of the total kerosene distributing business.

The Standard approached the Shell Company with a proposal that the latter should hand over 25 per cent. This was refused. The Shell and Royal Dutch Companies have now made themselves sole proprietors of the Sumatran oil wells.

The attacks of the American trust are said to be manifested in various directions. It has lowered prices in the East India markets to a rate which gives, it is alleged, no return for the oil it is shipping. To counteract the development of the oil fields in Egypt it has greatly lowered the price of kerosene there.

The Shell and Royal Dutch Companies, on the other hand, have disposed of 50,000 tons of petrol for the United States at prices 50 per cent. above those which the Standard is realizing in Europe. Therefore, they say, they do not fear competition.

An official of the Anglo-American Oil Company, which is regarded as the representative of the Standard Oil Company in this country, to-day made the following statement:

"We have not taken the initiative in any way. We are simply trying to hold the business here which we have built up with great labor and at enormous expense. There is no question of trying to drive other people out of business, but our impression of the arrangement that existed between the Shell Company and the Standard is that it referred only to the kerosene trade in the Far East. For reasons which I do not know the arrangement was broken off in the early part of August. It did not, I believe, apply to Europe at all, and was confined to kerosene, but when it came to an end a drop of about 4d. (8 cents) per gallon in the price of petrol took place here. We are simply keeping pace with our competitors, and have no intention of leading a war of cut prices.

There was formerly a kind of market arrangement by which we learned each other's prices and stuck to them. The change is that there is now more of a scramble for business."

On the Stock Exchange to-day there was an exciting time in the oil share market. Shell shares fell sharply and Russian and other oil shares declined appreciably.

A telegram from Vienna states that the news of the oil war has been received with equanimity by the Austrian oil industry. The manager of a leading Austrian firm said that the Standard's competition in Austria had not been very successful, despite the cut in prices, because of the preference given by Austrian purchasers to home industries.

"The Austrian oil firms and the Standard Company," continued this informant, "compete all over the Continent, but especially in France and Germany they wage a direct contest. Should the Standard be now contemplating a determined attempt to cut out the Austrian firms by a considerable reduction in prices, I have no hesitation in saying that the Austrian oil industry will fight. I know for a fact that there are financial supplies amounting to hundreds of thousands of pounds available to carry on such a struggle, and I believe it would be entered upon with every prospect of success."

A Berlin dispatch to The Daily Mail says the Standard Oil Company dominates the German market, and the only effect of rate cutting would be to strengthen the American hold upon it.

WOMAN FINDS A NEW STAR.

Mrs. Fleming Discovers Her Ninth in the Constellation of Sagittarius.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 4.—The discovery of a new star in the Constellation of Sagittarius was announced to-night by Prof. E. C. Pickering of the Harvard Observatory. Mrs. Williamina P. Fleming of the observatory staff, discovered the star on Oct. 1, in a photographic plate, and its presence was confirmed by an observation taken by Leon Campbell at the observatory last night.

The new star's magnitude, according to Mr. Campbell's observation, is about 10.5 and its approximate position is right ascension 17 hours 52 minutes 15 seconds declination, minus 27 degrees 32 minutes 3-10 seconds. The spectrum is quite faint, but shows bright hydrogen lines.

During the past twenty-five years but fifteen new stars have been found, eleven of which have been discovered by Harvard astronomers and nine of these by Mrs. Fleming from photographs.

50-CENT REWARD FOR RINGS.

Grateful Woman Gives a Hotel Maid That Sum for $1,000 Baubles.

A maid at the Hotel Knickerbocker found two diamond and pearl rings last night lying on the washstand in the women's dressing room, just off the main restaurant. She reported her find immediately to the office, and the rings were placed in the safe until the owner discovered her loss and returned for them.

An hour later a woman entered the hotel in a hurry and reported the loss of two rings, which she said were valued at $1,000. The rings were produced, and the woman immediately identified them as her own. Meantime the management had summoned the maid to tell just where she had found them.

"I'm so glad to get them back," said the woman, as she took the rings. Then she opened her purse and handed the maid 50 cents as a reward.

Before she had time to turn and go the manager of the hotel gave the maid $10 as a mark of appreciation for her honesty.

HOLD WOMAN AS SHOPLIFTER.

Has a $2,000 Bank Account; Accused of Stealing a 49-Cent Buckle.

Arrested by a store detective in a Fulton Street department store on a charge of stealing a belt buckle worth 49 cents, a well-dressed woman, who said she was Mrs. Anna Robertson of 195 Keap Street, Brooklyn, was found, when searched at the Adams Street Station yesterday afternoon, to have with her a bankbook showing deposits of more than $2,000 in her name in the Germania Savings Bank.

The woman insisted that she had had the buckle wrapped up and that she intended to pay for it, but Magistrate Tighe held her in $100 bail for examination. The bail was paid by George Hollohan, Jr., a lawyer, of 44 Court Street, son of Borough Inspector George R. Hollohan of Brooklyn, who afterward drove away with the woman in a taxicab. She refused to tell the name of her husband, and said she had inherited the money she had in bank from relatives.

21-POUND TRIPLETS.

Three More Little McLoughlins Bring the Family Total Up to Nine.

When friends congratulate James P. McLoughlin, for the last twenty years court reporter in the Supreme Court, he thrusts his hand in his coat pocket and takes out three cigars for each friend.

"Triple treats are expensive," he says, "but it's worth the money."

Mr. McLoughlin ought to know, for to him, too, has come a triple treat. On Thursday morning three baby boys, lusty-lunged and weighing seven pounds each, came crowing into the McLoughlin home at 569 West 161st Street. These, adding their twenty-one pounds of liveliness to the laughter and merriment of Mr. and Mrs. McLoughlin's six other children, have transformed the home into a veritable fun factory.

The treble newcomers will be distinguished one from another as Joseph, Carl, and Eugene, at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Rose of Lima in a few days. Mr. and Mrs. McLoughlin have been married twenty years. Their six other children came one at a time.

ANNOYED BY 5-CENT CHECK.

Enterprising Advertiser Sent Them to His Customers and One Objected.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A man entered the office of the Controller of the Currency to-day thoroughly angry because he had received a check for 5 cents to his order, drawn on a real bank for real money. He wanted to know if there wasn't "some way to stop this thing," but the officers told him there was not; that anybody who had money in a bank had a right to draw checks against it payable to anybody at his pleasure.

The bank on which the check was drawn was fairly buried to-day under literally bushels of other checks of the same sort which people brought in to be cashed. The man who drew the checks has a large account with the bank, and the checks, which were for 5 cents each, were mailed to hundreds of Washington people with a request to "spend this nickel for carfare" and visit the giver's place of business.

STIMSON CONTRIBUTED $150.

Sum He Gave County Treasurer Constitutes His Expenses of Nomination.

ALBANY, Oct. 4.—Henry L. Stimson, Republican candidate for Governor, to-day filed his statement of expenses with Secretary of State Koenig under the new law requiring an accounting by candidates for nominations. Mr. Stimson's statement is as follows:

"I contributed the sum of $150 to a fund which was being raised by the Treasurer of the New York County Committee for primary purposes and to defray the expenses preliminary to the State Convention. This contribution was not made with any thought of or to aid any candidacy of my own."

REBELLION IN LISBON BEGUN

King Manuel Reported to be a Prisoner—Fighting in the Streets of the City.

REBELS CAPTURE THE PALACE

Warships Shelling It—Communications Except by Wireless Cut Off.

REPUBLIC IS EXPECTED

Revolution Which Has Now Commenced Has Been Expected for Some Time.

STARTED BY A MURDER?

Belief That Assassination of a Well-Known Republican Was Immediate Cause of the Outbreak.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 5.—According to The Daily Mail a revolution started in Lisbon yesterday.

The dispatch adds that King Manuel is a prisoner.

There has, it is further asserted, been street fighting, and warships are bombarding the palace.

All communication with the capital is cut off.

The Santander correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company confirms the report of a revolution in Portugal, and adds that the rebels have captured the Palace at Lisbon.

No dispatches from the neighborhood of Lisbon have been received in London since yesterday afternoon, when the Eastern Telegraph Company announced the receipt of one from its station at Carcavellos, eleven miles from Lisbon, stating that all communication with the capital was interrupted.

The Daily Mail prints its report of the revolution without a date line.

A wireless telegram received by The Paris Matin reads:

"A revolution has broken out in Lisbon and warships are now bombarding the capital. The army and navy are supporting the revolutionaries."

The price of Portuguese bonds dropped heavily on the Stock Exchange here yesterday.

A recognized authority on Portuguese affairs, in an interview here, affected no surprise at the news of an uprising. He said the Republican Party was thoroughly organized and everything had been prepared for a bloodless revolution.

Two prominent Republicans, Senhors Lima and Relvas, the former the proprietor of the newspaper Vanguardia, the latter a land owner, were sent to London last August to assure the British authorities that the approaching establishment of a republic would make no difference in the friendly relations between Portugal and Great Britain, as the Anglo-Portuguese alliance, they said, was one of the peoples, not dynasties.

SANTANDER, Spain, Oct. 4.—A German steamer here has received a wireless telegram from the steamer Cap Blanco of the same line, lying off Lisbon, stating that warships began bombarding the palace just as soon as the rising within the city began.

Shortly afterward the revolutionists hauled down the royal standard that had been flying over the palace and replaced it with the Republican green and blue flag.

PARIS, Wednesday, Oct. 5.—The Echo de Paris prints a wireless dispatch from a correspondent, dated St. Marie de la Mer, Cape Blanco, 9:20 P. M., saying:

"A revolution has broken out in Portugal. A great part of the army and all the navy have gone on the side of the Republicans.

"At 2 o'clock this afternoon a bombardment of the Royal Palace commenced.

"All ingress to the city has been forbidden. It is impossible, therefore, to procure and forward details."

No confirmation of this has been received by the Foreign Office.

Telegraphic communication with Portugal has been interrupted since 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The Portuguese Legation has no knowledge of a revolution.

Sebastiao Magalhies Lim, one of the chiefs of the Portuguese Republican Party, who is now in Paris, declared that he is not surprised at a revolution in that country, which had been long predicted and for which preparations had been going steadily on.

The assassination of Deputy Bombard, he says, is the spark which started the conflagrations. The people saw in the murder of the chief of the Liberal League an act of clerical vengeance. Nothing more was required to set loose popular indignation and precipitate a revolution.

The Republican Party had [illegible]

[illegible] be effected [illegible] way by the operation of [illegible] people expressed freely and without restraint, but the obstinacy of the men in power and the blindness of the sovereign prevented this.

The dictatorial system desired by the party of royalty has remained, the laws against the press were rigorously applied, and journalists were forced to flee the country to escape jail. The police invented secret societies, the discovery of which permitted the persecution of the republicans, and no measure was neglected to stifle the voice of the people.

Peaceful citizens were arrested as suspects on mere denunciations. The ransacking of houses was a daily occurrence. The liberty and dignity of the population was violated in every way possible by a criminal court officer possessing the powers of inquisitor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—London late to-night is under the impression that the revolution in Portugal which has been predicted for some time has begun.

While no telegraphic or cable message from Lisbon has been received by any news agency since the morning, it is stated on good authority that information has been received that disturbances of a serious character have occurred in the capital.

The Republicans have, it is understood, achieved successes.

The Portuguese Legation here received no communication from Lisbon to-day.

The Eastern Telegraph Company at about noon received a message from Carcavellos, eleven miles from Lisbon, stating that all communication with the capital was interrupted.

It is said that the trouble may have arisen out of the assassination of Prof. Bombarda, a prominent adherent of the Republican Party, who was shot by an officer whom he had medically attended.

A Portuguese merchant who resides in London said to-night that he received news of a Republican plot in Lisbon as late as yesterday.

Since the confident prediction made by Dr. Megalhaes Lima, telegraphed to THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sept. 24, that the foundation of a republic was only a question of a very short time, there has been increasing belief in London that a revolution was likely to start at any moment.

The Times this morning prints no dispatches from its Lisbon correspondent, but it prints the Matin's wireless dispatch, and says it has reason to believe that the news of the revolution is true, although the rumor that the King is a prisoner is not well supported.

Private advices received from Portugal recently, adds The Times, referred to the danger threatening the monarchy. A letter from a well-informed correspondent at Lisbon, received here only last night, criticises the King as giving almost as little aid to the Monarchist cause as to the Progressives, and declares that his lack of force in political affairs has been accentuated by public suspicion of his private life.

King Manuel, says the correspondent, for these reasons has been rapidly losing the good esteem of those whose honest attachment to the Roman Catholic Church has hitherto held them loyal to the monarchy in his person.

The Times further points out that there have been many recent indications of approaching trouble—the permeation of military and naval officers with republicanism, rumors that Conservative statesmen were entering into relations with the Republican leaders, and similar signs that could only have one meaning—while the Court party displayed timidity, thus promoting the belief that it would offer no serious resistance to a revolution, which might, therefore, be effected quietly, and possibly by Parliamentary methods.

LISBON, Oct. 4.—Prof. Bombarda, the Republican Deputy and anti-Clerical who was shot by an army Lieutenant yesterday, died to-day.

News of his death was soon circulated, and a crowd of anti-Clericals assembled in the vicinity of the Professor's home and shouted: "Down with the priests!" lent collision between the Clericals and anti-Clericals.

In the interview referred to in the foregoing telegram from London, Dr. Lima, who is the editor of La Vanguardia of Lisbon, declared that the Portuguese people were at heart Republican and that the Republican spirit pervaded the provinces as well as the cities.

When asked if the Republicans were not afraid that all their plans might be smashed by the use of force on the part of the Government, Dr. Lima said that was impossible, as an attempt of the kind would instantly bring about a revolution.

Dr. Lima said he was confident that, if necessary, the army would take part in a revolution "and act in sympathy with the people against their oppressors."

"Then, whatever situation emerges from the crisis, you believe a republic must come?" was asked.

"On that," was the reply, "I have no doubt or hesitation whatever. Portugal is on the eve of great events. I repeat, a republic is inevitable, and nothing henceforth can arrest its triumphant career."

"Then you contend that all this is only a question of time?"

"Yes, and of a very short time, indeed."

King Carlos of Portugal and the Crown Prince, Luiz Philippe, were assassinated on Feb. 1, 1908, in Lisbon while driving to the palace in a carriage, which also contained the King's second son, the Infante Manuel, (now the King,) and Queen Amelie. They were shot by a band of men who, with concealed carbines, were waiting at the corner of the Praco Do Commercio and the Rua Do Arsenal. The King and the Crown Prince, upon whom the attack was directed, were each shot three times and lived only long enough to be carried to the Marine Arsenal near by. The Infante was only slightly wounded, and the Queen, who at the moment of attack had thrown herself on her eldest son to protect him, escaped unhurt. The police shot dead two of the assassins and a third was captured, only to commit suicide in prison. It was thought that the band was larger, but in the confusion the others escaped through the tremendous crowd.

The following day Prince Manuel was proclaimed King by the Council of State, with the title of Manuel II. He was 19 years old at his accession, the youngest reigning monarch in Europe. He was educated in the palace under distinguished instructors and at the age of fourteen he entered the navy as a midshipman, having risen to a lieutenancy by the time of his accession.

He went to England in the Autumn of 1909, and the British press, although without any official announcement, insisted that the purpose of his visit was connected with a betrothal to Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duke of Fife. If that were his errand it was unsuccessful. November of the same year found him in Paris. While he was there a French General was killed by an Algerian said to have been insane, and it was suggested that his deed was a misdirected attempt to kill King Manuel or President Fallières, who were near by when the attempt was made.

It has frequently been said that there has been a romance in the life of King Manuel and that he was devoted to the daughter of one of his mother's Ladies in Waiting. Although the lady came from one of the greatest families in Portugal it was considered expedient for the King to make a connection with a European power by marriage, and this was pointed out to him.

It had been planned that King Manuel was to visit Berlin in state in December at the invitation of Emperor William.

The Lisbon newspapers recently printed alarming reports of an alleged plot of the Clerical Party for the overthrow of the Portuguese Government and the establishment of a military dictatorship. The [illegible] declared that the Clerical Party's [illegible] dissatisfaction with the policy of the Government had culminated in the [illegible] of a rebellion to overthrow the administration, seize its members, set up a dictatorship, the first object of which would be to stamp out the Republican party.

BELIEVE DYNAMITE LAUNCH IS FOUND

Oakland Craft, It Is Thought, Carried Explosive Used on Los Angeles Times.

ITS NAME WAS CHANGED

Men Who Hired It the Same Who Bought Explosive the Police Say—More Bodies in the Ruins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4.—Answering the description of the launch Peerless, which is supposed to have carried the dynamite to blow up The Los Angeles Times Building from Giant, the launch Pastime was discovered this morning in Oakland Harbor. The police believe that the capture of the men who hired the Pastime on Friday, Sept. 20, will mean the arrest of those responsible for the explosion.

On Sept. 20 two men giving the names of Bryce and Perry rented the Pastime from Douglas A. Borroughs of Oakland. They made a $500 deposit and paid a liberal rental when they returned the boat on Sept. 26. Bryce and his companion answer the description given the police of Bryson and Morris, who purchased the explosive at Giant, Cal.

The boat showed the effects of hard usage. On the bow were the marks of tacks, as if a sign of metal letters had been tacked over the name "Pastime." This leads to the belief that the name "Peerless" was used to disguise the boat.

Earl Rogers of Los Angeles, the attorney who is in charge of the investigation of the explosion, said he had "important information," and he expressed the hope that the investigation would develop sufficiently to-day to justify its disclosure.

Determined efforts are making to trace the launch in which the dynamite purchased at Giant, Cal., by the trio of suspects was taken away. A craft answering the description of the launch has disappeared from Richardson's Bay, Sausalito.

Frank Leeman, a fisherman, says the launch came into a cove at Sausalito on the night of Sept. 20. He said he saw three men in it at night, but its occupants were not observed by day. When he returned from his fishing on the morning of Sept. 23 the boat was gone.

From the time the white launch last was seen at Sausalito by Leeman it was not observed again until about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when William Gorman saw what is believed to have been the same boat anchored off North Sausalito. At noon the craft disappeared.

Aluminium letters forming the name Peerless were purchased from a local firm on the evening of Sept. 22 by two men who tallied with the description of two of the trio of suspects who bought dynamite at Giant.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 4.—The seventh body and part of a backbone were recovered from the ruins of The Times building late yesterday. Several bodies are known to be pinned beneath the twisted steel girders, but it will be impossible to reach them until the girders are removed. The bodies are close together, and it is believed they fell down the elevator shaft. It is impossible to identify six of the bodies recovered.

The California Federation of Labor today adopted a resolution directing its President to appoint a committee of seven "for the purpose of thoroughly investigating The Times disaster," the committee being "instructed to co-operate with the committee appointed by the Mayor."

Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, proprietor of The Times, was arrested to-day on the warrant sworn to some time ago in San Francisco charging him with having criminally libeled Andrew Gallagher, a San Francisco labor leader.

Non-union employes at the Llewellyn Iron Works were thrown into a panic yesterday afternoon by the discovery of what was supposed to be an infernal machine in a brick warehouse near the plant.

Some one had arranged a small electric buzzer with a clock and two dry cell batteries attached, in a tin box, and secreted it in the warehouse. The buzzing attracted attention, and the apparatus was rushed to the police station, where it was found that it was not dangerous. It is supposed some one was trying to scare the workmen.

IMPERIAL, Cal., Oct. 4.—Sheriff Meadows to-day placed guards around the property of the California-Mexico Land Company on this side of the international line. Officers are guarding the property on the Mexican side.

Gen. Harrison Gray Otis and Harry Chandler are the principal stockholders in the company, which has vast holdings in both the United States and Mexico. The burning of two large stacks of hay in widely separated parts of the company's ranch in Mexico to-day and the finding of oil scattered about led to the precautions.

PRINTERS OFFER A REWARD.

Texas Locals Raise $10,000 to Hasten the Discovery of the Dynamiters.

GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 4.—Seventeen locals of the Typographical Association of America in Texas have voted an assessment which will aggregate $10,000 to be offered as a reward for the arrest and conviction of those who wrecked the building of the Los Angeles Times. The printers declare union labor is not responsible for this crime, and are willing to assist in every way possible to run down the dynamiters.

Resolutions indorsing the action of the typographical union of Los Angeles in sending printers to assist the publishers of The Times have been passed by the locals. The reward will be placed in the hands of the Los Angeles union.

LAWYER GAVE WARNING.

Drew Called Attention to a Letter Telling of the Unions' Desperation.

Walter Drew, counsel for the National Erectors' Association, showed yesterday data he has collected in the last three years of dynamitings on open-shop iron and steel construction. He specifies seventy cases, and submitted them yesterday as an answer to unionists' indignant denial that they ever resorted to such practices. These denials were reiterated following the charge that The Los Angeles Times, whose building was dynamited Saturday morning, had incurred the enmity of "foes of industrial freedom."

Drew's data will be placed at the disposal of those investigating the Los Angeles disaster.

When word of the dynamiting reached New York on Saturday, he thought immediately of a letter in the August Bridgemen's Magazine, published by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. It was so bitter that Drew sent it some weeks ago to The Los Angeles Times, feeling that Gen. Otis, as the spokesman of the open-shop principle in Los Angeles, might be a target for some demonstration of hostility. Mr. Drew showed the letter in which the writer says:

> In regard to the Los Angeles situation every day brings forth something new. The employers secured about a dozen injunctions against us, but found them difficult of enforcement, because no sooner was an injunction served on one of our pickets at one plant than we removed him to another, and replaced him with a new man. Then the employers conceived the idea of getting the city to enforce an ordinance to meet all requirements of the most sweeping injunction, and having it enforced at the expense of the city; this the city fathers did, in spite of all protests we could make, and the nefarious ordinance goes into effect immediately.
>
> The issue is now squarely put; we must win this fight or unionism in Los Angeles is doomed for years to come; the men in charge of the situation are wise, courageous, and determined; all the union men of the city are behind us, and all the central bodies of the State of California have assessed the members of their affiliated unions from 25 cents per week up.
>
> Los Angeles is the greatest stronghold and citidel of the organized enemies of organized labor; it is a fight for the life of organized labor in this city, nay, in this State, and a victory here, where the odds against us are acknowledged to be greater than in any other community, will be of indescribable worth to the universal cause of unionism; it will be an absolute and living proof that there is no community but can be organised.
>
> We have a backing we never expected to get; we have the men and the spirit, and with financial aid we can win the fight of the age and teach a grand lesson to the enemies or organized labor throughout the country.

The letter was signed "fraternally yours, J. E. Timmons."

Conspicuous in Mr. Drew's list of seventy cases was the destruction in Cleveland last November of the Corrigan-McKinney Company's $125,000 bridge, the thirteenth attempt of its kind in Cleveland in three years. Another case of interest was in Indianapolis, where a builder named Van Spreckelson had his barn and planing mill dynamited on the night of Oct. 25, 1909.

CENTRAL BANK PLAN OUTLINED BY BUSH

Member of Merchants' Association Says It Should Be Controlled by Disinterested Elements.

POSTAL BANK OBJECTIONS

President Pierson Restates Them—Patton Reviews Steps Taken to Safeguard Banking by New Legislation.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 4.—Banking laws and needed legislation protecting banking institutions were the principal themes at the convention of the American Bankers' Association to-day.

The convention was called to order by President Lewis E. Pierson, President of the Irving National Exchange Bank of New York City. The forenoon session was devoted to the annual address and report of President Pierson and reports of General Secretary Farnsworth, Treasurer P. G. Kaufman and General Counsel Thomas B. Patton.

President Pierson, in his annual address, spoke of the opposition of the association to the establishment of postal savings banks. That opposition, he declared, was based upon the principle that it is as improper for the Government to extend its paternalism and enter the banking business as it would be to enter the grocery or any other business; that there would always be a temptation on the part of succeeding administrations to regard the deposits so received as revenue rather than obligations; that such deposits, if accumulated to a vast amount and payable on demand, would in any future war crisis weaken the Nation's credit when that credit should be strongest; that, while adopted in other countries, it was a serious question whether its ultimate result there would not be found more harmful than beneficial; and, further, that with our country so completely and effectively served by savings institutions—in the East operated under State laws and supervision of unquestioned stability and in the West by savings departments in National and State banks—thus offering every facility and protection, such a departure by the National Government was entirely unnecessary.

The recent cotton and grain failures, revealing fraudulent bills of lading, had, Mr. Pierson said, precipitated a loss of confidence abroad in this document as an instrument of value. The stand foreign bankers had made was no doubt influenced by the failure of the Senate to enact into law the Stevens bill, drawn to hold issuing carriers liable for bills of lading signed by authorized agents whether or not the goods had been received.

Mr. Pierson alluded to the strict supervision exercised by the National and most of the State Governments over banking institutions under their jurisdiction. Remarking that the association had been a consistent advocate for better service in this respect Mr. Pierson said the administration of the present Controller of the Currency, Lawrence O. Murray, was a conspicuous and commendable example of what can be accomplished in his office, and that he was deserving of the thanks of the members of the association for the high state of efficiency to which he has brought the present system of National Bank supervision.

Irving T. Bush of New York, Chairman of the Committee on Currency of the Merchants Association of that city, addressed the association on needed banking and currency reforms from the standpoint of the commercial interests of the country. After reviewing the banking and currency system of Europe and declaring that the committee had found the proposed Central Bank idea undesirable in some respects, Mr. Bush said:

"As a business man and representative of an association of business men I have patiently studied all sorts of currency schemes, and am forced to the conclusion that a control of our currency by a modified form of Central Bank will be the best, and that such a control can be made to meet all the objections which have been raised against the present system. It is the method selected by the great nations with whom we are engaged in industrial competition. Let us keep our existing banking system, but provide those conducting it with efficient machinery to create the currency which the business man may require in the conduct of his business and payment of labor."

The speaker then cited some of the more serious objections which had been found with the Central Bank scheme, and referred to the committee's efforts to devise a modified system that would include the better features of all present systems.

"The matter," he said, "seemed to resolve itself into a limitation of the functions of the bank and a method of selecting a Board of Governors, which would guarantee that no one of the three elements of politics, bankers, or special interests could control. I will ask you to picture to your minds, as the committee has, a central bank governed by a board composed of bankers, a limited number of Government officials, and the balance men engaged in business, and not identified with other banking or politics, with its functions limited absolutely to dealing in foreign exchange in order to protect or build up our gold reserves, rediscounting certain approved forms of short-term commercial paper, and bills of exchange, or regularly organized financial institutions, and the issuing of banknotes; all profits above some fixed percentage, say 4 per cent., to go to the Government or to be used for some public purpose.

"Membership on this Board of Governors will be as highly esteemed by the banker and the business man as a position on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States is by the lawyer today. The one safeguards the final administration of our laws by the numberless courts of the country, and the other will supervise the use of our currency. Place the board in the limelight of public opinion and make membership worthy of the ambition of any man. The limitation of the functions can be absolute. The rediscounting can be limited to other institutions. The class of paper accepted can be prescribed and certain indorsements required. The issue of notes can be completely safeguarded and an adequate gold reserve maintained."

The report of the General Secretary, Fred E. Farnsworth, shows that the association has a total membership of 11,405 banks, and that the aggregate capital, surplus, and deposits of membership is $14,000,000,000. The year, said Mr. Farnsworth, had been a successful one for all the sections, and the membership of the association had largely increased.

The general counsel, Thomas Patton, addressed the association upon what had been accomplished in the way of legislation to safeguard banking. He said in part:

"In the criminal branch of the legislative work it is not alone the burglar with sledge, jimmy, and explosive, nor the robber with mask and pistol who must be reckoned with, but the educated, polished villain, the commercial fraud, who, by varied trick and misrepresentation, too often succeeds in causing a loss of bank funds. Measured by extent of pecuniary damage, crimes of force and violence, injurious as they are, are secondary in importance to crimes of deception and to frauds which only touch the borderland of crime. In the constant warfare against evil and the efforts of society to protect itself against wrongdoers, it is unfortunately true that criminal laws do not keep pace with the new inventions of fraudulently disposed persons, and while the Penal Codes of the different States cover generally such crimes against property as burglary, robbery, larceny, and the obtaining of money or property by false pretense, they do not adequately, or at all, define as crimes and punish a number of commercial frauds which, of late years, have been successfully perpetrated with increasing frequency. A beginning has been made toward improvement in the promotion of our bills to punish the making or use of false statements to obtain credit, a kind of fraud not adequately covered by false pretense statutes, and to punish the giving of checks or drafts against insufficient funds; and the work before general counsel in this relation, in addition to the further extension of our present criminal measures (which also include bills to punish bank slanderers and the crime of burglary with explosives) is the obtaining and classification of information of the different kinds of injurious, fraudulent practices, not now punishable, and the framing and promotion of legislation which will make such acts criminal."

Mr. Patton reported that apart from criminal legislation the work of promoting the State enactment of the uniform acts on negotiable instruments, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, stock transfers, and sales of personal property, as well as the special association measures relating to limit of time of liability for payment of forged and raised checks, the payment of deposits in two names and in trust and the competency of bank notaries was progressing satisfactorily.

The officers of the several steamship lines were also besieged by questioners during the day. But all that they could do was to reassure the anxious ones and to express the belief that the vessels would come to their piers in good time.

Following Dr. Doty's statement, this announcement came from the Hamburg-American Line:

CHOLERA AT MARSEILLES.

Three Cases on a Vessel—Italy Wants Our Restrictions Removed.

MARSEILLES, Oct. 4.—An official statement was issued to-night that three cases of cholera had been found among the passengers on the steamer Bosphore, now in this port.

The Bosphore arrived from the Orient, and has been quarantined. Sanitary officers immediately took charge of the patients, who were isolated, as well as all persons who had been in contact with them.

So far there has been no case of cholera in the city, and it is hoped that the prompt measures now being carried out will prevent the contagion from spreading to the residents.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Dispatches from Ajaccio, the capital of Corsica, state that cholera has appeared in Sardinia.

The Corsicans fear that the epidemic will spread across the Strait of Bonifacio, which separates Sardinia and Corsica.

ROME, Oct. 4.—Twenty-eight cases of cholera, with ten deaths, in the past twenty-four hours throughout Italy is the official report to-night.

Ten of the cases and three deaths are reported from Naples. The remainder are divided among the Provinces of Avellino, Bari, Caserta, and Naples.

NAPLES, Oct. 4.—The Italian Government is endeavoring to have removed the restrictions against the entry of Italian emigrants and products to the United States because of the cholera infection at this port and other places in Italy.

The Marquis di San Giuliano, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, has informed the authorities here that instructions have been sent to the Italian Embassy at Washington to bring the matter to the attention of the American Government, and the American Embassy at Rome has been asked to use its good offices as far as possible to obtain an arrangement to this end.

NOT SERIOUS, SAYS WASHINGTON

Precautions Against Cholera Likely to Keep It Outside the Gate.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Dr. Walter Wyman, head of the United States Bureau of Health and Marine Hospital Service, first learned to-night from the Associated Press of the probable presence of cholera aboard the Sant' Anna in New York Harbor. He leaves to-morrow morning for New York to confer with Dr. A. H. Doty, Health Officer of that port.

The Surgeon General does not regard the situation as serious, and believes the precautions taken by the United States Government precludes the possibility of cholera invading this country.

"We have practically doubled our inspectors at the cholera ports abroad," said he, "and the utmost vigilance is being exercised to see that no suspects take ship for the United States. The inspection is most thorough, passengers booked for our ports being detained for five days and remaining under close observation during that period. In addition, all their baggage and belongings are fumigated.

"In addition to the increased force of United States inspectors abroad, six experts from the Marine Hospital Service here are at work in the infected regions. Another sails for Naples to-morrow."

NOMINATIONS IN KINGS.

Democrats Meet and Name Their Candidates for Congress.

The Kings County Democrats made their Congressional nominations last night. In the Twelfth District George H. Lindsay was renominated. In the Third, James P. Maher, who received the nomination two years ago, but was defeated by the Republican candidate, Otto G. Foelker, was renominated. In the Fifth the nomination went to William C. Redfield, a manufacturer, of 141 Broadway. He was the first Public Works Commissioner of Brooklyn under Borough President Edward Swanstrom.

In the Sixth Michael E. Butler, formerly Democratic leader of the Twelfth District, was nominated. He is a retired stevedore living at 533 Third Street. In the Seventh District John J. Fitzgerald was renominated after heated debate. The nomination in the Fourth District was adjourned until Friday night, the delegates being unable to agree on a candidate.

In Queens Borough last night the Democrats in the First District renominated Andrew Zorn for member of Assembly and in the Second District Alfred J. Kennedy of Whitestone.

HAMILTON FISH RENOMINATED

Gets Unanimous Vote in Old Guard District, Though Classed as Insurgent.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Hamilton Fish was renominated for Congress in the Twenty-first District by a unanimous vote at the Republican Congressional Convention held here to-day. Although this is an Old Guard district and Congressman Fish is classed as an insurgent, there was no opposition to him before or during the convention.

Renominate Roosevelt's Friend Cocks.

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 4.—At the Republican Convention of the First Congressional District W. W. Cocks was unanimously renominated to-day for Congress. He is one of the closest friends politically of Col. Theodore Roosevelt in Nassau County. There is a possibility that W. Bourke Cockran may accept the nomination for Congress on the Democratic side.

BIG OIL WORKS BURN; HOSPITAL IN DANGER

Patients in a Panic as the Crew-Levick Co.'s Jersey City Plant Is Destroyed.

RAILROAD TRAFFIC TIED UP

Firemen Forced to Tunnel Under the Rails to Get the Hose Through—$50,000 Loss.

Fire destroyed the Crew-Levick Oil Company's plant at Hoboken Avenue and Eighteenth Street, Jersey City, yesterday at a loss of about $50,000. Of this $40,000 was covered by insurance. There were seven large tanks and five small ones filled with about 50,000 gallons of naphtha, gasoline, and kerosene oil. This oil and 400 or more barrels filled with different kinds of oils that were in a warehouse ready for shipment went up in smoke. The warehouse and a chain of small buildings, some used for workhouses and others for offices, were burned to ashes.

For about six hours a cloud of dense black smoke whirled in a northwesterly direction over Jersey City Heights, in many places dipping on houses and causing fear to the occupants. When the fire started, supposedly from a boy throwing a lighted cigarette into some oil-soaked waste in the company's yards, the flames spread rapidly to the warehouse, and in less than a half hour the tops of two big tanks were hurled high into the air by explosions within.

This started the black smoke going and by the time the firemen arrived other tanks had popped their tops, and what looked to be one of the city's biggest blazes was roaring like a forest fire. The wind was blowing due west at this time and the dense black smoke was enveloping Christ Hospital on Palisade Avenue on the Heights overlooking the fire.

The hospital authorities became frightened and the patients began leaving their beds and cots, expecting every minute to see the institution catch fire. The wind suddenly changed, and the smoke was carried off in a northwesterly direction and away from the hospital. Then order was restored.

The Fire Department, all the available companies of which had been called out on three alarms, had some difficulty in getting to the fire, which was in an out-of-the-way place, alongside the tracks of the West Shore Railroad and the Weehawken branch of the Erie Railroad. The police with difficulty managed to keep about ten thousand persons outside the fire lines, and 20,000 others watched the blaze from the Heights. Traffic was stopped on the railroad and trenches were dug under the rails through which lines of hose were stretched.

Steady streams of water were played on buildings in the immediate neighborhood. Some of the plants in the danger zone were the Halsted Packing Company, the E. V. Colby Stove Works, Proctor Brothers Cooperage Company, and about half a dozen tanks of the Standard Oil Company. The change in the wind saved them.

All freight traffic on the West Shore and Erie tracks was tied up, and the few passenger trains of the West Shore Road that move between Jersey City and the Weehawken Station had to be sent over the Pennsylvania and Lackawanna tracks.

It was after 8 o'clock last night when Fire Chief John Conway called all but two engines from the scene of the fire. These were kept there for emergency sake and until th fire had burned itself out.

William H. Lawdham, Superintendent for the Crew-Levick Company, said he could not estimate the damage, but Fire Chief Conway was authority for the approximate damage of $50,000.

Several firemen were slightly overcome by smoke, but remained on duty. They were Capt. John Harms and Frank Baldwin, Truck 2; Lieut. John Burke and Hugh Bartley, Engine 6, and Lieut. Hugh McManus, Engine 5.

McADOO EXTENSION DELAYED.

Six Months Leeway Given to the Company to Go On with the Work.

The Public Service Commission adopted an order yesterday granting to the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company an extension of six months in the time allowed to begin work on the continuation of the McAdoo subway from Thirty-third Street and Sixth Avenue to the Grand Central Station.

The reason assigned in the application for this extension is that there have arisen many and complicated problems of engineering, particularly near the Grand Central Station, where the New York Central Railroad has not yet developed its own plans far enough to allow the McAdoo Company to proceed with its construction.

any immediate action by that committee. Mr. Folks attempted to address the board on the subject, but was ruled out of order on a motion by Alderman Dowling, sustained by Vice Chairman Bent, who was acting in place of President Mitchel.

Alderman Folks said that his resolution was not directed at Mayor Gaynor.

"Neither is it intended to relieve him of any responsibility by taking the inquiry out of his hands," said Mr. Folks. "It is designed merely to get at the truth. I have consulted with no one on either the Republican or Democratic side of the Aldermanic Chamber, nor with any one else."

It was learned that Mr. Mitchel has placed most of the information contained in his report to the Mayor before the Special Grand Jury, which is investigating vice, and that further evidence concerning what Mr. Mitchel construes as Commissioner Baker's "inefficiency" will be placed before the Grand Jury by Mr. Mitchel personally unless some decided action is taken by the Mayor.

There was a report around City Hall that Commissioner Baker had sent or would send to Mayor Gaynor an exhaustive report setting forth his defense to the charges made by Mr. Mitchel and explaining why he did not get evidence against gambling houses and disorderly places reported by the investigators from the office of the Commissioner of Accounts.

Sergt. Mallam, confidential man in the Police Commissioner's office, paid a flying visit to the Mayor's office yesterday afternoon.

Fire Commissioner Waldo's visit to the Mayor started a rumor that he and Police Commissioner Baker were about to exchange places. After a talk with Mayor Gaynor the Fire Commissioner went out to lunch with Chamberlain Hyde. It is generally supposed that Commissioner Waldo would like to take charge of the Police Department. His friends are said to have been making efforts to effect the change.

Knowing ones gather from the Mayor's utterances yesterday, however, that Commissioner Baker is likely to hold on.

HEARST'S WIRELESS ORDERS TO PREVAIL

Independence League Convention Will Take Directions from the Leader at Sea.

MAY ADJOURN FOR HIM

Up-State Delegates Think the Ticket Should Be Held Back Until He Gets Here.

The Independence League State Committee held a meeting last night at the Park Avenue Hotel. In the absence of any instructions from William R. Hearst, the league's leader, who will not arrive in New York on the Mauretania until Thursday, the members of the committee did little else than follow the cue of the Hearst newspapers and attack the Democratic candidates. There are 150 members of the committee and about 140 were present. John J. Hopper, Chairman of the committee, was not present, but Clarence J. Shearn presided.

The object of the meeting was to elect new officers, but even this procedure was not followed, the members agreeing that everything should be left to the convention which meets this afternoon at 4 o'clock at Cooper Union. Among the speakers last night who had satirical things to say about the Democratic nominees were George Galbraith and Dr. Eckhart of Monroe County and John Bradley of Dutchess.

The New York members had carefully refrained from expressing any opinion regarding what action the convention should take until the up-State members arrived, and when they got in town yesterday it was found that the consensus of opinion among them was that instead of the league putting a ticket of its own in the field, the convention should decide to indorse the Republican ticket, or the top of it at least. This question will be fought out in the convention.

Everything, however, will depend upon the wireless messages expected to-day from Mr. Hearst. Some of the committeemen last night went on record as favoring the making of a deal with the Republicans whereby Mr. Hearst would be nominated for Lieutenant Governor, provided the Republican nominees for that office could be persuaded to resign. With Mr. Hearst the nominee on the independent ticket for Lieutenant Governor, the league would then indorse all the rest of the Republican ticket.

The candidates for Temporary and Permanent Chairman of to-day's convention were not considered last night. There are several candidates for the Temporary Chairmanship, but Mr. Shearn will probably be agreed upon. At to-day's convention it is expected that most of the time will be taken up with the platform. It is certain that this will declare for direct nominations even to the extent of the abolition of State conventions.

L. J. O'Reilly, Mr. Hearst's political secretary, who will represent him at the convention, expects to receive final instructions from his chief to-day. Some up-State delegates arrived in town yesterday, and many of them expressed themselves as being decidedly in favor of the convention taking no action until Mr. Hearst arrives. It is not improbable in view of these opinions that an adjournment will be taken to-night until to-morrow. There are several contests among up-State delegates to be decided, and the convention will take up this task first.

STIMSON NOTIFIED; OUTLINES HIS POLICY

Republican Candidate for Governor Pledges Himself to Continue Work Begun by Hughes.

DENOUNCES TAMMANY HALL

And Declares State Rights Will Be Best Preserved by a Vigorous Performance of State Duties.

In the same room at the Republican Club where less than a month ago the Republican State Committee humiliated Col. Theodore Roosevelt by electing Vice President Sherman Temporary Chairman of the State Convention, the Colonel's candidate for Governor, Henry L. Stimson, was formally notified of his nomination last night. The other candidates on the Republican State ticket received their official notification at the same time.

The only one of the candidates to deliver a speech of acceptance was Mr. Stimson. In this—which will remain one of the notable campaign utterances of the Gubernatorial nominee—Mr. Stimson pledged himself to a continuation of the policies of Gov. Hughes, and in a general way to safe progress within Constitutional and conservative lines.

Such utterances of Mr. Stimson's as "State rights will be best preserved by a vigorous performance of State duties" and "A progressive and efficient State Government is the best protection against undue extension of Federal power," were vigorously applauded, as was his denunciation of "the frantic outburst of protest" against Federal regulation, which Mr. Stimson declared emanated "from the same interests that are now voiced in the Democratic platform."

Other salient features in Mr. Stimson's speech were a denunciation of Tammany Hall and the present effort on the part of that organization to control the Democratic Party in the State, his plea for the "short ballot" and his assurance that if elected he will use all the powers vested in the Governor by the Constitution in an effort to have enacted without delay a direct primary law, as pledged in the Republican State platform.

The Other Candidates.

The notification ceremony was held in the large assembly parlor on the second floor of the Republican Club, where Gov. Hughes twice was notified of his nomination for the office to which Mr. Stimson now aspires. Mr. Stimson and the other candidates were ranged in a half circle near the northern windows of the large room. The candidates for the other places on the ticket are Edward Schoeneck of Onondaga, candidate for Lieutenant Governor; Samuel S. Koenig of this city, candidate for Secretary of State; James Thompson of Rensselaer, candidate for State Controller; Thomas F. Fennell of Chemung, candidate for State Treasurer; Edward R. O'Malley of Erie, candidate for Attorney General, and Frank M. Williams of Madison, candidate for State Engineer.

Judge Irving G. Vann of the Court of Appeals, who was renominated by the Republicans, did not attend in person, but sent a brief letter of acceptance, which was read at the conclusion of the speechmaking.

Lloyd C. Griscom, as Chairman of the Notification Committee appointed by the Republican State Convention, made the formal notification speech. Turning to Mr. Stimson he said:

"On behalf of the Notification Committee appointed at the convention, I have the honor and pleasure of notifying you, Mr. Stimson, that you were its choice as candidate for Governor." Then turning to the other candidates and addressing them one by one by name he repeated the same formula. Addressing them generally, Mr. Griscom said:

"On behalf of the Notification Committee, I desire to say to you, the candidates of our party, that we feel the Republican Party in honoring you is in itself honored by the selection for its banner bearers of men of such high standing and so thoroughly equipped to perform the serious duties of the various offices for which you are candidates.

"As the days pass since our convention, the prospects of Republican success are rapidly and steadily improving. If you are elected, as you deserve to be, it will mean that for two years to come the people of the State of New York will have a continuation of the progressive Republican Government from which the people have been so greatly benefited."

Mr. Stimson at once stepped to the front, and producing a typewritten manuscript read his speech from it. He read with a clear enunciation and slow, telling emphasis, in a strong and pleasant voice. It was noticed that he skipped only part in his prepared speech, which contained any reference to his own achievements in connection with the prosecution of the sugar frauds by the Federal Government. This is what he said:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Notification Committee: With a high appreciation of the honor conferred by the convention, and with a profound sense of the responsibility assumed, I accept the nomination for Governor. [Applause.]

"I am deeply impressed with the importance of the mission of the Republican Party as a leader in progress. As our Governments, State and National, confront the successive problems which are raised by the great industrial and social changes of our country, the welfare of the people and the security of their material interests will be found to depend in very large measure upon whether or not the leadership in such changes is taken by the Republican Party. [Applause.] The giant growth of our commerce and our industries, the absorption of our free land, the gradual change of the American Nation from a farming people to one largely living in cities with needs far more diversified than those of their fathers, have made and are making necessary a constant growth in our system of laws and in their administration.

"If the intelligent and prosperous business men of the country continue to participate in this movement the necessary changes will be wise, constructive, and permanent. Should they, on the contrary, go into opposition, the necessary reforms would still undoubtedly come eventually, but they would come less wisely and conservatively, and with far more likelihood of disturbance to business and to the public. [Aplause.]

Faith in the People.

"We have faith in the ability of the people through their Governments, State and National, to successfully confront these necessary changes and to exercise the powers which such changes involve. They have done so many times in the past. We do not in the least share the apprehensions of our opponents in this respect. Republics do not become corrupt and inefficient by bravely undertaking their growing duties.

"On the contrary, corruption follows in the train of inaction and inefficiency. Governments which fail to control a recognized evil, which lull themselves with the fatuous hope that the evil will correct itself always find that the task grows daily more difficult through the pressure of the private interests that are fostered by the evil.

"Our party, when in control of the Government of this State, as of the Nation, has not hesitated to face these responsibilities. The past decade is a long record of progressive legislation and of increasingly efficient administration by both Federal and State Governments.

"Federal legislation has freed our inter-State railways from the obstruction of rebates and discriminations. Federal sanitary laws have made it possible for the citizen to depend upon a far distant food supply with safety and confidence. Federal labor legislation is not merely reducing the appalling list of industrial casualties, which has brought reproach upon our railways and factories, but is daily bettering the condition of the workman and producing more satisfactory relations between him and his employer and between both and the public.

"Not one act of this series has been passed without a frantic outburst of protest from the same interests that are now voiced in the Democratic platform, and the same pretended appeal to the constitutional safeguards of the fathers. [Applause.] Yet the legislation, when enacted, has gone into effect without any disturbance of legitimate business conditions; the courts have gone steadily forward approving its constitutionality; and the business men, by whom, as Federal jurors and grand jurors, the laws have been enforced, have, by their attitude, given convincing evidence that the honest business man has nothing to fear from, and does not fear, progressive and well-considered regulation. [Applause.]

"The coming campaign is a State campaign, to be decided upon State issues. In the case of our State Government alarm against progress is not only groundless but inconsistent. For a progressive and efficient State Government is the surest safeguard against undue extension of Federal power. [Applause.] Those who profess fear of undue activity by our National Government should be the first to insist upon vigorous and forward policy in the State. State rights will be best conserved by a vigorous fulfillment of State duties. [Applause.] Yet the same opposition has greeted most, if not all, of the series of Republican measures of economic and social legislation which have been enacted under the brilliant leadership of Gov. Hughes. [Applause.]

Points to Reform Laws.

"It is well to bear in mind the long list of such progressive enactments, all of which, when challenged, have received the approval of the courts. The Public Service law, with its amendments, including the effective control of gas and electric light companies; laws making more effective the supervision of insurance and banking, the Pure Food and Inspection law, acts requiring sanitary conditions in factories, safeguarding the employes and limiting the hours of employment for minors; the act strengthening the semi-monthly payroll, and regulating employment agencies; the recent act providing for the regulation of telegraph and telephone companies, and finally, and of great importance, the act establishing in New York for the first time in the Union the principle of compulsory compensation for industrial accidents, and correcting much of the gross injustices of our Negligence law.

"The opposition which greeted and has followed the Public Service law has scarcely died away. Yet the President of the largest railroad under the supervision of the New York commissions has recently made public his emphatic approval of that law's working looked at from the standpoint of his railroad and of the public. President Brown of the New York Central says in his last annual report to his stockholders:

> The influence and the co-operation of these commissions have been uniformly beneficial to the road, and have done much to improve the service for the public.

"Such is the record of our party as a progressive party. We propose to use this method of the past in dealing with the problems of the future. [Applause.] We propose to apply our constitutional system to the successive social conditions that arise, hopeful that it will be found adequate for the purpose. We do not propose that our Government shall stand still while all else moves forward, and we do not propose to be deterred from such progress by any dishonest cry of innovation. We assert, on the contrary, that this is the method which our fathers employed in meeting their own problems; that it is the only method which a constitutional democracy can employ, and that the alternative, inaction, leads to inefficiency and corruption.

"Legitimate business has nothing to fear from such a programme. Such progress in the past has never been inconsistent with permanent prosperity. On the contrary, it is an insurance against ultimate disaster.

"When we consider the obstructive attitude toward progress by Tammany Hall, which now seeks to place its hands upon the government of the whole State, we are not likely to swerve in our convictions. [Applause.] It becomes clear that the assumed dread of Government usurpation is either a mere jingle of words without substance or a cloak to cover the motives of selfish interests to which Government inaction would be a source of unjust profit.

A Slap at Tammany.

"Such is not a new experience with Tammany Hall. Progressive reforms in the public interest in New York City have been frequently throttled by an alliance between that organization and the sinister influences which profited out of a continuance of the abuse or evil. The voters will not be beguiled into surrendering the State Government to Tammany by sonorous phrases in a platform.

"I pledge myself, if elected, to the principles of constitutional progress which I have outlined, and to a vigorous continuance and development of these policies of Gov. Hughes. [Vigorous applause.]

"The Republican platform contains as its very first pledge a promise of relentless warfare upon official and legislative wrongdoing in this State, and the continuance of the inquiry now proceeding, with additional authority if required, until all such wrongdoing shall have been brought to light. I heartily indorse this pledge, and promise, if elected, to bring all the power of my office to bear for its fulfillment. [Applause.]

"It has been my duty while a Federal officer to conduct investigations of similar wrongdoing in the customs service of the Port of New York, and to prosecute to conviction officers of that service for complicity therein. I regard the thorough and unsparing exposure of all such corruption as the first duty of a responsible Government. Aside from all other considerations, no greater service can be rendered to one's party than to use the utmost endeavor to rid it of such a plague spot.

"Investigation alone, if more can be accomplished, is not sufficient. Investigation is merely the beginning of the task. Where existing laws are sufficient to reach the men who have been responsible for the shame, such men should be relentlessly punished; where they are not, additional legislation must be enacted to render such occurrences in the future forever impossible.

"The issue upon which the attention of the State during the past two years has been most closely concentrated has been that of direct nominations. We all recognize, and reprobate, the evil at which this remedy is aimed. Our number of elective officers is so large, and the consequent political machinery involved in nominations so complex, that the average citizen leaves such matters to the control of more or less professional leaders or bosses.

"Upon the nominating convention, under such circumstances, it is easier for the compact special interests to make their influence felt than for the unorganized public at large. Out of these difficulties arises frequently that corrupt combination of dishonest business and venal politics which is such a serious menace to our modern political life.

"It is against this evil that the system of direct nominations is aimed. Its purpose is to bring the candidate into more direct relations with the electors; in this way to perfect and insure true representative government and to eliminate the boss and the convention with their opportunities for professionalism and corruption.

Favors the Short Ballot.

"It may be that the evil cannot be entirely cured until we simplify our elections by diminishing the number of elective offices and concentrating more responsibility upon those whom we do elect, and in my judgment one of the great political reforms of the future lies along the lines of the so-called 'short ballot' system. [Strong applause.] That reform, however, rests in the future. It requires much public discussion and constitutional amendment for its adoption. The system of direct nominations requires no such delay.

"The platforms of both parties contain declarations in its favor. Under such circumstances the records of the two parties furnish the best guide to the elector as to the sincerity of their professions. It is to the Republican Party that all of the statutes now upon the statute books safeguarding the present conduct of primary elections are due. To the Republican Party is also due that recent legislation which has so purified elections in New York City, and which by its platform it pledges itself now to extend to primaries.

"Each of these preliminary reforms has been persistently contested by our opponents. It is to a Republican Governor, Gov. Hughes, that credit is wholly due for a campaign of education throughout the State which has enlisted the great majority of the electors of the State in favor of direct primary legislation.

"In the last Legislature a majority of the Republicans in both houses voted in favor of this legislation, and it was defeated through the action of a majority of the Democrats in both houses. At the Republican Convention at Saratoga, after a full and open debate upon the question, our party pledged itself definitely to the enactment of the principle into law.

"There can be no honest doubt as to which party is the true friend of the reform, and in the hands of which its future is alone secure. The reform should be put into effect at once. It should be put into effect in such a manner as will most surely guarantee its successful working, and its efficacy against the evil at which it is aimed. I undertake, if elected, to use the constitutional powers of my office to that end.

"Rather than engage in a multitude of specific pledges, I prefer that the people should judge of my conduct in the future by my conduct in public office in the past. I can, however, express my profound realization of the duties and responsibilities of the Chief Executive of the State. He is the representative of no special locality or interest, but of the people of the whole State. It will be my aim, if elected, to conduct my office with an eye single to their interest and their welfare."

Some of the Men There.

The notification ceremony was attended by a notable gathering of Republicans. There was a preponderance of organization men and a majority of those of the progressive type. There were also present a number of Republicans who have not been very active in politics except in years when the party has been closely identified with movements launched in the interest of civic reform. The vanquished Old Guard was not altogether without representation, but such leaders as former Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff and William Barnes, Jr., of Albany were conspicuous by their absence, though both were in the city.

Among those who attended were Senator Elihu Root, Speaker James W. Wadsworth of the Assembly, Surveyor of the Port Gen. Nelson H. Henry, Frank Dudley Tansley, James Talcott, Henry Melville, Bronson Winthrop, Seth Low, A. G. Bailey, Bernard Biglin, Henry Gleason, "grandfather" of the Republican National League; James Yereance, Herbert Parsons, Robert Kelly Prentice, Arthur L. Merriam, Senator George B. Agnew, and Tax Commissioner Charles S. White.

Mr. Stimson will make his first speech this evening at the Congressional Convention of the Seventeenth District, where his rival for the Gubernatorial nomination, William S. Bennet, will be renominated for Congress. To-morrow he goes to Fonda in response to an invitation to speak at the Montgomery County Agricultural Fair.

BROOKLYN OLD GUARD SAD.

More Sighs Than Smiles When Saratoga Ticket Is Indorsed.

Looking about as blithe and jolly as so many undertakers officiating at a funeral, the members of the Kings County Republican Executive Committee held their first meeting yesterday afternoon since the Saratoga Convention.

The only "progressives" to put in an appearance were Representative William M. Calder and Alfred E. Vass. The scene was too depressing for Mr. Calder and he fled after one look at the funeral-like faces around him. Mr. Vass stayed.

"Of course we indorse the ticket and platform," suggested Chairman Brenner, in sepulchral tones.

The committeemen started and an epidemic of colds suddenly broke out among them. They all coughed and seemed with great difficulty to be clearing their throats.

"I say," pursued Mr. Brenner, grimly, "of course we indorse——"

"Oh, yes—certainly; we guess so anyhow," interrupted the committeemen hastily.

A hollow grin was observed in the vicinity of Mr. Vass.

It was decided to have the County Committee go through the motions of ratifying the action of the Saratoga Convention on Thursday of next week. As the committeemen dejectedly filed out, Mr. Vass absently hummed a few bars of the Miserere from "Il Trovatore."

BOLTS STIMSON; TELLS WHY.

Charles H. Young Gives Nine Reasons for Not Supporting Him.

Charles H. Young, former President of the Republican Club, resigned from that organization yesterday, giving as his reasons that he could not support the Republican ticket this Fall. Mr. Young is a man who has prided himself on his party regularity, but yesterday he announced that he would support John A. Dix and the Democratic ticket, giving this as his reason:

"If Mr. Stimson is elected Governor this Fall Theodore Roosevelt will be elected President in 1912, and then we will never get him out of the White House."

The dislike of Mr. Young for Col. Roosevelt is of long standing, and his decision did not come altogether as a surprise to the members of the Republican Club. Years ago he made a speech at the club following Col. Roosevelt's denunciation of some Federal Judges, in which he said:

"If Emma Goldman or Herr Most had said from a barrel in Union Square what Mr. Roosevelt has said they would have been rushed off to jail."

Mr. Young gives these reasons for his decision to support the Democratic ticket:

1—The need of thorough housecleaning in the State.

2—The need of a purging before the National election.

3—The need of economy and the doing away with extravagant frills, such as the Public Service Commissions.

4—The defeat of Stimson is the only means of putting out of business the most arrogant boss in the history of this country.

5—Because the Republican Party under its present boss is an anti-Supreme Court and anti-law and order party, and because Theodore Roosevelt has abolished representative government.

6—The election of Theodore Roosevelt as President in 1912, which inevitably would follow Mr. Stimson's election, would place the business of the country face to face with four years of windstorms ruinous to business.

7—Because of disbelief in destruction or any other feature of the "New Nationalism," but in law and order.

8—Because Mr. Stimson has already been well enough paid for what work he did in prosecuting the sugar frauds.

9—Because I believe that John A. Dix is an able, honest, independent gentleman, worthy of any citizen's support.

This is the letter Mr. Young wrote to Seth Low, President of the Republican Club:

> While I have voted the Republican ticket for twenty-nine years without splitting it, I feel that, as I cannot do so this year, my continued membership in this club would be a species of hypocrisy very popular at present to a portion of the general public, but to me abhorrent. It costs me a pang to sever these club relations, as you may realize, but it must be.
>
> I hope to be with the club in sentiment after this election, as Nationally my politics are sounder Republicanism than those of many who will remain in the club, and I trust that we all may be working shoulder to shoulder for the re-election of William H. Taft or for a candidate of equal balance two years hence.

Mr. Young is one of the active Republican leaders in Westchester County. He lives at New Rochelle.

Brooklyn Democrats Likely to Indorse Those Named by Republicans.

Although the organization Democrats in Brooklyn would prefer to nominate for the Supreme Court bench men from their own ranks, they may, against their will, indorse the non-partisan ticket already named by the Republicans, as a wise measure of politics.

The Republicans have renominated Justices Samuel T. Maddox and Garret J. Garretson, Republicans, and Justice Harrington Putnam, independent Democrat, who was appointed by Gov. Hughes. There seems to be fear among the Democrats that if they name candidates of their own, the Hearst organization will indorse the Republican nominees. The Democratic Judiciary Convention will be held to-morrow.

PRENTICE TAKES WOODRUFF'S PLACE

Deputy Attorney General Chosen Republican State Chairman, Ending Old Guard Control.

BARNES CONCURS IN IT

New Leader an Opponent of Direct Nominations and Not the First Choice of Roosevelt.

Without any perceptible jar, control of the Republican organization passed from the Old Guard to the progressives yesterday, when the new State Committee met and elected Deputy Attorney General Ezra P. Prentice as its Chairman.

There was one slight note of discord, though. William Barnes, Jr., the Republican boss of Albany, who retains membership on the committee, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Prentice, said he did this "in view of the known opposition of Mr. Prentice to direct nominations."

There was another feature connected with the election of Mr. Prentice that came in for some comment on the part of committee members and others. He was not the first choice of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, though the Colonel did not object to placing him at the head of the State Committee. Inspired statements from Sagamore Hill on Monday made it clear that Col. Roosevelt would have preferred to see his friend Charles S. Francis of Troy, a constituent of "Right-hand Man Collins," selected for the place. Mr. Prentice, it was learned, was the man Henry L. Stimson, the Republican nominee for Governor, wanted, and Mr. Stimson had his say.

It fell to the lot of Col. Lafayette Gleason, Secretary of the Reublican State Committee in many victorious campaigns, to call yesterday's meeting to order. He did this without any undue formality, merely stating the purpose for which the members had assembled. Lloyd C. Griscom, President of the New York County Republican Committee, and now a full-fledged member of the State Committee, placed Mr. Prentice in nomination.

"I rise to second the nomination of Mr. Prentice," exclaimed Mr. Barnes. "I do so with especial pleasure in view of Mr. Prentice's well-known opposition to direct primaries."

Mr. Prentice was then named by acclamation, both old guardsmen and progressives voting for his election. Col. Gleason was then re-elected Secretary by unanimous vote. Charles W. Anderson, the negro Collector of Internal Revenue, was re-elected member at large, a place he has held for years.

Mr. Prentice was not at hand when elected, but he was notified and soon appeared. He opposed the direct primaries plank of the progressives at the Saratoga conference. He alluded to this in a brief speech he made before the committee adjourned.

"You all know that I was not in favor of every plank that went into our platform," he said. "But the platform was adopted by a substantial majority, and now is the policy of our party, which I shall uphold in good faith. My success will depend on what help you give me. I ask you, therefore, to carry our ticket to the victory it deserves to win and I am sure will win in November."

Senator Elihu Root, who was Permanent Chairman of the Saratoga Convention, and in that capacity was authorized to name a committee which should fill the candidacy for the vacant place on the bench of the Court of Appeals, which was not provided for by any nomination made by the Republican State Convention, then appeared and named these men to serve on the committee: Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Majority Leader Edwin A. Merritt, Jr., of the Assembly; Philip Elting of Ulster, Ray B. Smith of Onondaga, Borough President George Cromwell of Richmond, Speaker James W. Wadsworth of the Assembly, William H. Daniels of Erie, and James Kilby of Orange, and Senator Root, ex-officio.

The committee resolved to indorse Frederick Collin of Elmira, who was nominated by the Democrats at Rochester. The Rochester Convention before naming Mr. Collin indorsed the renomination of Judge Irving G. Vann, made by the Republicans at Saratoga.

The only protest against the proposed action came from Mr. Barnes. He said:

"For years it has been the custom when the convention did not nominate a candidate for any position on the State ticket to leave the selection to this committee. In this instance, however, a committee composed of a member from each judicial district was named to undertake the selection.

"I understand that this committee will name as the Republican candidate Frederick Collin of Elmira, who has been named as the Democratic candidate, and I wish to protest against this action which would place the Republican organization in the position of making no nomination. I have nothing to say against Mr. Collin as a gentleman, but I believe that he is or was the law partner of John B. Stanchfield, and I do not believe that it is the will of the rank and file of the Republican Party in this State to place Mr. Stanchfield's law partner on the Court of Appeals bench. Therefore, I desire to file my protest and hope that he will not be made the nominee."

Congressman J. Sloat Fassett, who himself comes from Elmira, came to the defence of Mr. Collin.

"I want to say that I have known Mr. Collin all my life," said the Congressman. "He is a high-toned gentleman, and one of the best qualified men I know for the position. I believe that his nomination and election by Republican aid will be an honor to our party and to our State."

The committee met at noon and nominated Mr. Collin, Senator Root as its ex officio Chairman, expressing his fullest approval of the action.

Mr. Prentice, who was elected Chairman of the State Committee, is not a member of that body, and under the circumstances will have voice but not vote in its deliberations and actions. He is at present Deputy Attorney General, in charge of the office in this city. He comes from a splendid family and is well known in society. He is a member of Squadron A, the crack cavalry troop of the National Guard in this city. He served some years in the Assembly, and until a year ago was the Republican leader of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District.

GOOD CLOTHES AND MAKING GOOD
An Advertisement by Elbert Hubbard

¶ Carlyle once said that man donned clothes in the beginning, not so much for the purpose of protecting himself from the heat of the sun and the inclemency of the weather as from a desire to add to his natural attractions by decoration.

¶ The first clothing was simply a coat of paint, done decollete.

¶ But time has tamed us and we now need clothing as a matter of self preservation. So we smile at the old desire for embellishment and demand clothing with quiet dignity, which serves its purpose and lets you forget it.

¶ Saks & Company study the needs of the modern men of brains and personality, and make suits that satisfy the best in men. Cut from strong, beautiful weaves by honest clothes-crafters, Saks' Suits are right in every detail.

¶ One hundred point men realize that good clothes and making good go together. Saks & Company have a lot to do with successful New Yorkers. They help make them.

¶ If you want a suit to assist you in your business, call on Saks and Co. If dressing well interferes with your business quit the business, because it will soon quit you. A man who has not the time nor inclination to dress well is toboggan ticketed to Tophet.

¶ Having a suit, made by Saks & Company, is a profitable transaction for you in more ways than one.

WHIPPLE, CONDEMNED IN REPORT, RESIGNS

Hughes's Inquirers Tell of Evils Throughout Administration of the State's Forests.

LAW BREAKERS LET ALONE

Squatters Are Unmolested—Exorbitant Prices Paid for Lands—John K. Ward Also Likely to Go.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Severe criticism of the administration of the affairs of the State Forest, Fish, and Game Commission is made in a report submitted to Gov. Hughes to-day by Roger P. Clark and H. Le Roy Austin, who were appointed a commission to investigate the department. James S. Whipple of Salamanca, who has been the head of the commission since 1905, resigned his office to-day.

The report criticises Mr. Whipple for attempting to finance the Fairhaven Iron Ore Company with moneys secured from operators in Adirondack timber lands, employes in his department, and others. It severely condemns the administration of the legal bureau of the department, particularly John K. Ward, chief counsel. It declares that settlements have been made at a great loss to the State. It is understood that Mr. Ward will retire.

Frank L. Bell, who was employed as special counsel and loaned $6,000 to Whipple, was found to have been "acting in the Spring of 1909 as a legislative agent of the International Paper Company while ostensibly acting for the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission. He resigned Sept. 24.

It is declared that exorbitant prices have been paid for State lands, of which the bulk have been purchased from George N. Ostrander, who had financial dealings with Mr. Whipple and Col. William F. Fox, Superintendent of Forests, who died a year ago. Col. Fox had great influence with the board, and his judgment was often taken by the Land Purchasing Board.

Squatters on State lands have not been compelled to move off. Lumber thieves have been permitted to go on without being called severely to account. Violators of the game laws have not been punished.

Before Gov. Hughes retires from office Thursday or Friday he will appoint a successor to Mr. Whipple, who in turn will choose new counsel and assistants and generally reorganize the department.

Mr. Whipple was first appointed Commissioner by the late Gov. Frank W. Higgins in 1905, and was reappointed by Gov. Hughes. His term would have expired April 11, 1912.

The salary of the State Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner is $6,000 per annum, and that of Special Counsel Bell was $7,500, while Mr. Ward received $4,500.

The report of Messrs. Clark and Austin is a long one. It praises some of the bureaus in the department, and goes on:

Condemnation of John K. Ward.

After praising the administration of several of the bureaus under Mr. Whipple the report says:

> The administration of the legal department under John K. Ward deserves severe condemnation; his incompetency and unfitness for the position which he occupies has been proved, and is now admitted by Commissioner Whipple in his sworn testimony. Although the head of this department, Mr. Ward's examination clearly showed his ignorance of its real workings, and, together with the records of his office, developed a most deplorable condition of affairs.

Prosecution of violations of the game laws in New York City was placed in charge of Selah B. Strong, of that city, in 1905. Mr. Strong, the Commission finds, was very successful in these prosecutions, but that he was continually interfered with by Mr. Ward. It also appears that Mr. Strong resisted the importunities of those having political influence, and that his employment ceased after he had protested against compromises with offenders for sums smaller than the State was entitled to receive.

Speaking of the employment of Frank L. Bell, it is said he was regarded as a lawyer of ability especially familiar with Adirondack land transactions, but they discovered that he had been acting in the Spring of 1909 as a legislative agent of the International Paper Company while ostensibly acting for the Forest, Fish and Game Commission. This was reported to the Forest Purchase Board, who accepted Mr. Bell's resignation on Sept. 24, 1910.

In regard to squatters upon State land in violation of the constitutional provision that such land "shall be forever kept as wild forest lands," the report says:

> Our investigation, verified by the records of the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission, disclosed approximately 150 parcels of land owned or claimed to be owned by the State which are occupied in this manner (for purposes of fixed habitation,) and there are undoubtedly many others.
>
> The character of these places ranges from the Summer home of the well to do, such as that of Karl Bitter at Raquette Lake, or that of W. D. Mann on Waltonian Island, Lake George: the large Summer hotel, such as the Blythewood of J. O. A. Bryere at Raquette Lake; the clubhouse, such as that of the Rap-shaw Club at Witchopple Lake; the comfortable home of the Adirondack farmer or guide, down to the hut of the poorest class of Adirondack natives.
>
> All are squatters, and their occupancy of State land alike prohibited under the Constitution.

Timber Thieves Not Stopped.

Speaking of timber cutting on State lands, the Commissioner says that the practice is going on as before, and that 540 trespass cases have been reported in Ward's time. They go on:

> We are absolutely satisfied that under the administration of Commissioner Whipple, even after all the notoriety with reference to the settlement of trespass cases which directly led to his appointment, the State has not received in damages and penalties the actual value of the timber stolen during the last five years, nor anywhere near it, and we firmly believe that if a vigorous endeavor to collect the penalty had been made in some of the large trespass cases arising in the early part of Commissioner Whipple's administration many of the later trespasses would never have occurred.

Commissioner Whipple is criticised for his continued traveling, about three-quarters of his time having been spent away from his office in Albany. It is admitted that much traveling was required, and he did much to stir up sentiment in favor of forest preservation by lectures, but it is declared that he did not spend enough time in his office, and that he should restore several thousand dollars paid by the State for journeys to and from his home at Salamanca.

Details are given of Whipple's activity in organizing the Fair Haven Iron Ore Company. With him were associated George N. Ostrander, George R. Finch, and Walter C. Witherbee, operators in timber lands and employes of the department. Whipple got money to invest in this concern on notes indorsed by Ostrander and by a loan from Witherbee. Whipple testified that he gave ample security for the loans, but the report says:

> The fact is that Commissioner Whipple early in his administration formed a business corporation which, like all mining corporations, was more or less hazardous; he invested practically no money himself, but for the financing of the corporation depended largely upon those with whom, as Forest, Fish, and Game Commissioner, he was then having, and throughout his entire term has had, extensive transactions of an official nature. The impropriety of Commissioner Whipple's actions in this respect is self-apparent.

Commissioner Whipple testified that he has never permitted his business relations with George N. Ostrander to influence his official action. Speaker Wadsworth, who was a member of the Forest Purchase Board, upheld him in this statement.

In the inquiry into purchases of forest lands the Commissioners failed to find a single instance where money was actually paid to influence the action of the State board. The report goes on:

> The nearest approach to such action lies in the purchase, on March 12, 1908, of 13 1-3 shares of the Fair Haven Iron Ore Company, at par, from Superintendent of Forests William F. Fox, through George N. Ostrander for the estate of George R. Finch, deceased; this purchase took place at the time the so-called "42,000-acre offer" was pending before the Forest Purchasing Board. Col. Fox had been Superintendent of Forests for many years, probably had more influence with the Forest Purchasing Board than any other person, and this stock was taken off his hands, through Mr. Ostrander, at a time when the same was practically valueless. Commissioner Whipple was President of the Fair Haven Iron Ore Company and signed the certificate issued by him on March 12, 1908, upon this transfer, yet testifies that he had no knowledge of the transaction until after the death of Col Fox, which occurred June 16, 1909.
> George N. Ostrander, an attorney of Albany, has been for many years one of the most extensive operators in Adirondack real estate. Mr. Ostrander was the active man in the Raquette Falls Land Company, the business associate and personal attorney for George R. Finch prior to his death on Jan. 12, 1906, the business associate of and an attorney for George F. Underwood, the Vice President of the International Paper Company, and a large owner of Adirondack real estate. For himself and persons whom he has represented as an attorney or agent, Mr. Ostrander has sold to the State more forest land during the administration of Commissioner Whipple than all other persons combined, and at a much greater average price, though of no greater value.
>
> From Jan. 1, 1905, to the appointment of your Commissioners on Feb. 16, 1910, the Purchasing Board bought and paid for 147,771.9957 acres of Adirondack forest land for the sum of $848,990.54. Of the foregoing 100,831.1932 acres were purchased from George N. Ostrander personally, or from him as attorney for other parties, for the sum of $639,461.21, an average price per acre of $6.34. From persons not connected with or represented by Ostrander, 46,940.8025 acres were purchased for $209,429.33, an average price per acre of $4.46.

It is declared that a careful investigation shows that in the great majority of cases the State has paid for lands a price largely in excess of the market value of the property and largely in excess of values fixed by the official appraisers. To the excuse offered by Wadsworth and Whipple that Adirondack lands have advanced in price, the Commissioners reply that softwood timber lands have advanced, but the properties purchased in the last five years have been practically denuded of softwood. It is declared that there has been little market for such lands, "except as such sales are made to persons who quickly sell the same to the State." The report says:

> Both Commissioner Whipple and Speaker Wadsworth take the position that contemporaneous sales are not satisfactory evidence of the market value, and that the work of the Forest Purchasing Board should be measured also in the light of the prospective value of the lands rather than by the value thereof at the time of purchase. Your commissioners emphatically dissent from both contentions.

Fox's Aid to Ostrander.

In dealing with the methods of purchasing lands the report shows that the State board placed great reliance on the judgment of Col. William F. Fox, the Superintendent of Forests, who had been in the department for twenty years, and who was familiar with all its activities. Col. Fox, who is described by Mr. Whipple as a Democrat, had much power. Appraisals of lands made by the official appraisers were reported to him. He made his own reports to the board, and the board relied on his judgment. In many cases purchases were made at prices largely in excess of those fixed by the appraisers.

Much attention is given to the operations of Ostrander. One case treated at great length is the sale of 41,183 acres in the vicinity of Schroon Lake in 1908. He offered a tract of 63,000 acres at $8 an acre, and the tract taken brought him $7.25 an acre for all but 3,872 acres, for which $8 was paid. It was after the option had been taken by the State that Ostrander purchased Col. Fox's mining stock for $1,333.

About 11,000 acres of the tract lay outside the Adirondacks Park, and a special law was put through by Speaker Wadsworth to permit it to be taken in. Of the method of purchase the report says:

> Of the 41,183.0867 acres conveyed to the State under this offer it seems certain that no appraisals whatever were made by the State's Inspectors of 26,504.93 acres, and that 11,424.74 acres were inspected three and a half years before the purchase by the State.

The report then gives a list of the lands which appear to have never been inspected, and continues:

> No appraisals of the foregoing lands are on file in the office of the Purchasing Board and no person can be found who ever saw such appraisals. Commissioner Whipple testifies that his recollection is that Col. Fox had a schedule of appraisals and that the board acted upon that. This schedule cannot be found, however. Speaker Wadsworth, on the other hand, testified that Supt. Fox specifically told the board that all of the lands had not been inspected, but that he knew the character of the whole tract and that the lands were all of about the same character as those which had been inspected.

Denial by Whipple.

In his letter of resignation to Gov. Hughes Mr. Whipple says:

> This is not the time to discuss either the facts or the conclusions set up in the report, but I do emphatically deny the truth of the facts stated, and disagree from the conclusions reached. I recognise, however, that, as a result of this report, my usefulness to the State in this department has been destroyed.
>
> I have held this position for six years. I was not an applicant for the position. I have come to appreciate the great importance of the work of this department to the people of the State. The field covered is so large that much of it must be intrusted to subordinates. That a critical examination covering the six years of my administration would disclose errors of judgment and mistakes made should be expected. I will only say that my conscience acquits me of any intentional neglect or dereliction of duty. It is a thousand times more important that this great work should go on, and that it should not become a subject of political contention than that I should retain the office.
>
> For these reasons, to relieve you of any embarrassment, and without solicitation on the part of any one, I respectfully tender my resignation.

Gov. Hughes in response wrote Mr. Whipple as follows:

> It is impossible for me adequately to express the regret that I feel at the conditions which the investigation of your department has shown to exist.
>
> Your work has been strongly commended to me by those who are interested in the protection of the forests and in the conservation of the State's interest in these important resources. You should have full credit with respect to those matters in which there has been increased efficiency; and I desire to believe, and I accept your statement, that you have not been guilty of wrong intention.
>
> But the conditions which have been shown to exist cannot be ignored and must be immediately rectified.
>

ALTMAN AT LAST GETS WHOLE BLOCK

Adds to His Store Property by a Madison Ave. Purchase at About $1,250,000.

IN THE MURRAY HILL ZONE

Long Lease on the Plot Now Occupied by Knoedler & Co.—Store to be Enlarged.

By the purchase, announced yesterday, of the northwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street by B. Altman & Co., that firm is now in a position to enlarge its store capacity so as to take in the entire block bounded by Fifth and Madison Avenues, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Streets. For this valuable corner, for which Mr. Altman has been patiently negotiating for more than two years, it is understood he paid somewhat more than $1,250,000.

The property has been held by its two owners at $1,300,000. Notwithstanding the large sum that Mr. Altman has paid to round out his holdings in the block, it was not regarded as excessive by real estate brokers when the growing importance of Thirty-fourth Street as a business centre is taken into consideration, with the additional transportation facilities which that section of the city now enjoys through the recent opening of the Pennsylvania station and the East River tunnels.

The two houses just acquired are 188 and 190 Madison Avenue, with the adjoining stables in Thirty-fourth Street. The corner house, No. 188, with the stable next door on the street, was purchased from Mrs. Margaret A. Howard, while the adjoining one, at No. 190, with the stable at 15 East Thirty-fourth Street, was acquired from the Union Trust Company. The corner house and stable, it is said, have been held lately at $800,000, although $1,000,000 was the asking price some time ago, while for the other plot $500,000 has been asked.

Mrs. Howard has netted a handsome profit in the sale of her house, for just twenty years ago she bought the property for $190,000, and she now sells it for four times that price, placing this Madison Avenue corner in the list of New York plots which have advanced in value with meteorlike rapidity in recent years. The adjoining Madison Avenue house was formerly the Delano residence. Mrs. Howard has occupied both houses for some time as a dressmaking establishment under the name of White, Howard & Co.

In this sale, which is the most notable made in that locality in a long time, ranking as one of the biggest transactions of the year, George R. Read & Co. acted as brokers for the Altman concern, while Cruikshank & Co. represented the Union Trust Company in the sale of 190 Madison Avenue with its Thirty-fourth Street stable. Both of the houses have a frontage on Madison Avenue of a trifle over 37 feet, giving Mr. Altman a corner plot of 75 feet on the avenue by 145 feet on the street. Besides these two houses there are four others on the Madison Avenue block in the rear of the Altman store. They belong to the William Waldorf Astor estate, and are under lease to Mr. Altman for a long term of years, with liberal renewals.

While no positive information could be obtained as to their future disposition, it is gnerally understood that Mr. Altman, now that he controls the entire Madison Avenue block, will eventually tear down the old residences and enlarge his store over the entire plot.

With the exception of these Madison Avenue houses on the Thirty-fifth Street corner, the store now occupied by M. Knoedler & Co. on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street and two or three other parcels occupied by the store, all of which are controlled by Mr. Altman under long leases, he owns outright the entire block, one of the most valuable in New York.

The corner store occupied by the Knoedler art firm which prevented Mr. Altman from completing his Fifth Avenue frontage when he built his department store in 1900 is owned by the John N. A. Griswold estate. Mr. Altman tried hard to get the property when he made plans for his new store, but it was under lease to the Knoedlers, and they objected to moving. The lease will expire May 1 next. Mr Altman obtained a long lease on the plot from that time, and the Knoedlers are now erecting a new building on the old Lotos Club site in Fifth Avenue, adjoining the northwest corner of Forty-sixth Street, abutting on the Fifth Avenue Church property.

When the Altman store was built the plans were arranged so that as soon as this old brownstone building was obtained the store could be completed in harmony with the rest of the Fifth Avenue façade. Just as soon as the art firm moves the building will be demolished and the Fifth Avenue front of the store completed.

The two houses just purchased by the Altman firm were originally a part of the Astor estate, but in 1840, by a deed of trust, were transferred to the Chanler estate. John W. Chanler, a former Congressman and Sachem of Tammany Hall, lived for a time in the large house in the middle of the block at 192 Madison Avenue. He was the father of the former Lieut. Gov. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and of Robert Winthrop Chanler, whose matrimonial affairs with the opera singer, Mme Cavelieri, have lately attracted so much attention.

The Chanler estate disposed of them several years ago, but the Astor estate retained possession of the other houses, including 192 to 198 Madison Avenue, inclusive. In 1878 Franklin H. Delano lived at 190, John W. Chanler at 192, Thomas Stokes at 196, and Cornelius Bliss at 198, on the Thirty-fifth Street corner. Recently they have all been unoccupied, except one which has been used as a girls' school.

With the probable improvement of this Madison Avenue block in the near future for the Altman store, Mr. Altman, while owning one of the most valuable blocks in the city for retail purposes, will also have one of the largest stores. He now controls a block fronting 320 feet on Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Streets and 197.6 feet on both Fifth and Madison Avenues.

The improvement of the Madison Avenue front raises an interesting point regarding the commercializing of Madison Avenue in the choice Murray Hill residential district. Just one block above the Thirty-fifth Street corner on the east side of Madison Avenue is J. Pierpoint Morgan's fine home. It stands in the heart of the Murray Hill restricted zone, which extends from Thirty-fourth Street to the south side of Thirty-eighth Street. The houses opposite the Madison Avenue side of the future Altman store are in the restricted zone.

The Cameron Building, on the Thirty-fourth Street corner of Madison Avenue, has already cut into the restricted area, despite the fight made in the courts by the residents to prevent it. It was pointed out that with a large department store opposite their residences those dwellings would hardly be favored as private homes. Above Thirty-eighth Street business is already making rapid inroads, and the influence exerted by the Altman purchase in this locality will be watched by Murray Hill residents and many others with the keenest interest.

FIFTY YEARS A MERCHANT.

Employes Give a Gold Cup to James McCutheon.

In commemoration of the half century during which James McCutcheon has been in business in this country, about a hundred of his business associates in the Linen Store, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, gathered last night at the Waldorf and presented to him a gold loving cup. James M. Speers, who made the presentation, spoke of the history of the store and pointed out how the northward march of the retail district of New York might be traced by the removals of the store.

Mr. McCutcheon began business in 1864 at Broadwy and Astor Place, then thought far uptown. He next moved up to near Fourteenth Street, and in 1880 took a store just around the corner at 10 East Fourteenth Street. At this time the only means of public travel along Broadway was by stage. It was not till 1885 that Jake Sharp's cable cars were constructed.

In that year Mr. McCutcheon went to the site of the old Booth Theatre, 64 and 66 West Twenty-third Street, and even then did not install at first the electric light and telephone. In 1898 he went to 14 West Twenty-third Street, opposite the old Fifth Avenue Hotel. Five years later he moved again north, to Thirty-fourth Street.

Mr. McCutcheon returned thanks for the gift. Other speeches were by Thomas Potts, Samuel Richardson, George Riggs, George McCutcheon, all linen men of this city; R. W. Poor, President of the Garfield National Bank, and Henry Galland of Paris.

SUFFRAGISTS TACKLE LEAGUE

Committee Will Attend the Hearst Convention to Get a Plank.

Four members of the Woman Suffrage Party, appointed at a City Committee meeting yesterday, will attend the State Convention of the Independence League, which opens at Cooper Union at 4 o'clock to-day, to see about a suffrage plank in the league platform, which they expect to get. The league in California has given the women their plank, and Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Mrs. Charles Beard of Manhattan, and Mrs. Robert Elder and Mrs. Grace Wolterbeek of Brooklyn are delegated to bring New York into line.

The women who visited the downtown Democratic nominating conventions recently to obtain hearings were not cordially received, and Miss Lavinia Dock organized an outdoor meeting in Catherine Street, between Madison and Monroe Streets, last night, that the disaffected might have a chance to hear the women in that way.

At the same time Mrs. Harriet Johnston Wood and Miss Quesada were speakers at another outdoor meeting at Eighty-fourth Street and Broadway.

The annual City Convention of the Woman Suffrage Party, which will be held in Carnegie Hall on Oct. 28, will have markers to show where the eighteen delegates from each of its assembly districts are sitting.

CAPT. FINCKE DENIES GUILT.

Case Against Navy Collier's Skipper Goes Over to Thursday.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 4.—The case of Capt. W. C. Fincke of the navy collier Ajax, arrested last night upon the charge of embezzling $5,000 in Government funds, was postponed by United States Commissioner Stephenson to-day until Thursday.

Capt. Fincke said, though allowed by law ten days to settle his accounts, he was not given ten minutes. He declared he would settle in full if given reasonable time. He denied being an absconder. His bond was fixed at $2,500.

Fincke's arrest resulted from a report by Rear Admiral Lewis C. Heilner, Supervisor of Naval Auxiliaries, that he believed there was a shortage in the collier's funds.

CATHOLICS GREET THE PAPAL LEGATE

Cardinal Vannutelli Welcomed on His Arrival for the Consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

SAILORS MAN SHIP FOR HIM

All-Night Vigil for the Sacred Relics Precedes the Ceremonies Which Will Begin This Morning.

The ceremonies connected with the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral began last night with the removal from the high altar of the relics which it contains and the keeping of a vigil all night before them as they lay in a temporary altar erected in the Conference Hall of the Cathedral College, Fifty-first Street and Madison Avenue. They will remain there till they are borne back in solemn procession by Archbishop Farley this morning toward the end of the consecration ceremony.

Cardinal Vannutelli, the Prefect of the Apostolic Signatura and the Legate of the Pope to the recent Eucharistic Congress in Montreal, arrived yesterday morning and was welcomed by Archbishop Farley. He is now staying at the Cathedral Palace and makes the third Prince of the Church to come to the city for the ceremony, Cardinals Gibbons and Logue being already here.

Cardinal Vannutelli, who was accompanied by Bishop O'Connell of San Francisco; Mgrs. De Croy, Tempeiro, Lego, Father Galese Uginet, his two nephews, Counts Galileo and Enrico Vannutelli; Mgr. Caglatti, and Thomas Hughes Kelly, Knight Commander of St. Gregory, left Cresson, Penn., on Monday night and reached Newark early yesterday. There he was the guest of Bishop O'Connor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, to whose house he was escorted by Mgr. Whelen and Roman Catholic laymen.

After mass had been celebrated they came on to New York by automobile. Archbishop Farley, with a numebr of churchmen and laymen, went to meet His Eminence at the North German Lloyd pier in Hoboken. As His Eminence appeared the clergy kissed his ring and the laymen knelt for the apostolic blessing. Here the party boarded a steamer on which was the band of the Catholic Protectory, which took the Cardinal for a trip up the Hudson to see New York from the water front.

The sailors on the battleships had word of his coming. Many of them are Roman Catholics, and they manned ship in honor of the representative of the Holy Fatner. It was an entirely unofficial ceremony, but as the Cardinal passed battleship after battleship and saw the sides lined with white-uniformed sailors standing stiffly at attention, while above them from the bridge the signalmen with their multicolored flags passed the word on that His Eminence was approaching, it was evident that he was greatly pleased with the tribute paid to him.

He was informed of the accident on Saturday night, when so many men lost their lives through the upsetting of a launch, and expressed his great regret. His tall figure could easily be picked out from among the other ecclesiastics. He is 6 feet 4 inches in height, and wore a cardinal edging to his cassock, a cardinal sash, and a cardinal band to his hat to denote his rank in the church.

The trip up the river was as far as Grant's Tomb, and then the steamer turned and made a landing at the Columbia Yacht Club's pier, at Eighty-sixth Street. A large crowd had gathered to greet the Cardinal, but his principal welcome to Manhattan came from the children. More than 1,500 children from the parochial schools had been marshaled on Riverside Drive, with the yellow and white Papal flag and the Stars and Stripes in their hands.

They sang several songs, including "The Star-Spangled Banner," accompanied by the Catholic Protectory Band, and then his Eminence set off in an automobile with Archbishop Farley and Mgr. Lavelle for a drive through Riverside Drive and Central Park to the Archbishop's residence, at Madison Avenue and Fiftieth Street.

The Cardinal stayed there quietly all the afternoon. Several of the prominent ecclesiastics and laity of the archdiocese were received by him in the course of the evening, and at dinner the three Cardinals sat down together. Among the suite of Cardinal Vannutelli is Thomas Hughes Kelly, Knight Commander of the Order of St. Gregory, whose family has contributed $400,000 to the erection of the Lady Chapel, attached to the cathedral.

Inside St. Patrick's yesterday preparations were in progress for the ceremony this morning. All the pillars have been covered with Autumn foliage, and from the openings cut in the walls between the arches spring bushes of many colored leaves. The entire under surface of the western gallery has been hidden with branches, and as the ecclesiastical procession enters the Cathedral to-day it will seem to be passing under the foliage of many trees to the distant high altar. On every pillar and arch have been placed innumerable small golden crosses of the St. Andrew shape.

The western doors are draped with the Papal flag, and show the coats-of-arms of the diocese, and from posts erected all around the green fly alternately the Stars and Stripes and the colors of the Church.

The High Altar of St. Patrick's has been consecrated for some years, but as it was much more convenient to have the ceremonies performed at it than at any other of the side altars, it has been technically desecrated according to the forms provided for that purpose. It had been intended to have a procession last night with the relics which lie in it to the Cathedral College across the street, and many persons gathered to see this part of the ceremony. This, however, was given up at the last moment, and after the doors of the Cathedral had been closed to the public the relics were quietly removed and carried privately to the college.

There last night in the presence of a group of clergy, including the Rev. Fathers Edwin Sweeny, James F. Driscoll, James Flood, Thomas A. Thornton, William Hughes, and James M. Byrnes, with the Rev. Father John J. Byrne as master of the ceremonies, matins and lauds were sung. The students of the college sang the services and laity filled the back of the hall. All night before the temporary altar in which the relics now lie, candles will be kept burning and members of the laymen's organizations connected with the churches of the city will keep vigil.

The actual ceremony of the consecration is timed to begin at 5:30 o'clock this morning. It will follow closely the historic ritual of the Church and will take about four hours. Archbishop Farley will perform the ceremony, and in preparation for it has maintained the strictest fast since noon yesterday. It will impose a severe test on his strength, as should physical weakness overcome him before the last act is performed, the entire ceremony would be declared invalid and would have to be performed over again.

According to the ritual no layman is allowed in the cathedral till the consecration is complete, and so all that the public can see of the ceremonies are those which are performed outside. At the beginning there will be no one at all in the cathedral except a solitary Deacon, the Rev. William B. Martin, whose duty it will be to admit the Archbishop when he demands that the doors be opened.

The ceremonies will begin with three circuits of the Cathedral on the exterior by the Archbishop, his attendants, the Rev. Fathers Luke T. Evers, Bernard F. McQuade, and Patrick N. Breslin, and the choir. After prayer at the west door he will march round, blessing first the foundations, then the walls, and last the upper portion of the structure.

The exterior blessed, the Archbishop will rap with his crozier on the western door. The deacon inside will call in Latin:

"Who seeks admission?"

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in," will be the Archbishop's answer.

"Who is the King of Glory?" the Deacon will ask.

"The Lord, strong and mighty. The Lord, mighty in battles," the Archbishop will reply.

Twice more will the Deacon ask his question, and only when the Archbishop has told him: "The Lord of Armies, He is the King of Glory," will the doors swing slowly back.

Then the Archbishop and his immediate attendants will file in and the doors will once more be closed and locked. Then will begin the consecration of the interior of the cathedral, one of the principal ceremonies in which is the inscribing on the floors of the Greek and Roman alphabets to symbolize the Jews and Christians. The floor will be spread with ashes, and in one line diagonally across the cathedral the Archbishop in his mitre will write the Greek letters with his crozier, and in another line, so as to form a St. Andrew's cross with the Greek alphabet, the Roman letters.

From the altar steps the Archbishop will then give the entire cathedral a general blessing with salt, water, and ashes, and will then march to the Cathedral College to bring in the relics. These will be placed on the altar and the ceremony of coonsecrating the interior will begin in detail, which will conclude with the consecration of the altar itself.

The public will not be admitted till the celebration of pontifical mass, at 11 o'clock. At this the celebrant will be Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, and the preacher Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis. In the sanctuary will be Cardinal Vannutelli, Cardinal Logue, Archbishop of Armagh; Mgr. Falconio, Apostolic Ablegate to the United States; Archbishops McEvey of Toronto Bilczewski of Limbourg, Austria; Ryan of Philadelphia, Ireland of St. Paul, Christie of Oregon, Quigley of Chicago, Moeller of Cincinnati, Blenk of New Orleans, O'Connell of Boston, and McGrath of Halifax, N. S., and the Bishops of Fort Wayne, Mobile, Springfield, Albany, Pittsburg, Helena, Buffalo, Concordia, Los Angeles, Wheeling, Davenport, Fall River, Detroit, Altoona, Syracuse, Manchester, Wichita, Rochester, Scranton, Cheyenne, St. Augustine, Savannah, Cleveland, Trenton, Brooklyn, Rockford, Oklahoma, Charleston, Newark, Philadelphia, Burlington, Superior, Richmond, Portland, and Columbus.

Cardinal Gibbons will be assisted by Mgr. John Edwards, Vicar General. The deacons of honor will be Mgr. McGready and Kearney, the deacon of the mass the Rev. John J. Kean, and the sub-deacon of the mass the Rev. John A. Nageleisen. The deacons of honor to Cardinal Vanutelli will be Mgrs. Brann and Wall; the deacons of honor to Cardinal Logue will be Mgr. McMahon and Seagrave, and the masters of ceremonies will be Mgr. Hayes, Lewis, and Father Byrne.

The prelude will be Mendelssohn's Op. 10 and the mass will be Gregorian. The offertory will be P. A. Yon's "Jerusalem Surge" and the postlude Kleinmichel's, Op. 37.

At 8 o'clock in the evening pontifical vespers will be sung with Mgr. Falconio as celebrant and Mgr. Edward McKenna as assistant priest. The deacons of honor will be Mgrs. Connolly and Murphy, and the service will be chanted by the Revs. John J. Kean, Edwin M. Sweeny, Charles M. Casserly, P. A. Wade, John H. Dooley, and Louis Traufler. The masters of ceremonies will be Mgrs. Hayes and Lewis and Father Burne.

A special luncheon for the clergy attending the consecration an dthe pontifical high mass, who are expected to number at least 1,000, will be held at 1 o'clock this afternoon in Cathedral College.

Chief Inspector Schmittberger is in charge of the police arrangements and has ordered eight Captains and 475 Lieutenants, Sergeants, and patrolmen to report this morning at 5 o'clock at the Cathedral for duty.

VAUGHAN ANSWERS THE PRESBYTERIANS

Jesuit Priest Says if Catholics Were Free in Latin Countries Nations Would Now Be Happy.

DECAY OF PROTESTANTISM

Preacher Says He Referred to the Passing of Its Spiritual Power to Erect Temple in the Human Soul.

Father Bernard Vaughan, the noted Jesuit orator of Londan, who attended the recent Eucharistic Congress at Montreal and, who on Sunday, in this city, at St. Patrick's Cahedral, proclaimed his belief in the decay of Protestantism, last night, answered the Presbyterian Ministers' Association, which on Monday, passed resolutions condemning what the ministers said was his pronunciamento against Protestantism, and calling Father Vaughan's attention to the condition of Spain, France, Italy and South America in contrast with this country.

Father Vaughan, who spoke at the Brooklyn Academy of Music last night for the benefit of Brooklyn College, chose as his subject, "Joan of Arc." Orchestra seats sold for $2 and the boxes for $25, and they were all full.

Last night, after choir boys had sung, ex-Corporation Counsel Delaney, referred to Father Vaughan's work in the slums of London, saying: "He talks about the aristocracy of God's poor," Father Vaughan then took the front of the stage and began, not about Joan of Arc, but about the Presbyterians.

"A Presbyterian minister, lecturing to his people in the country from which I come," he said "ventured to remind his people that the aim and object of this life is not happiness but duty. 'Is any one of you very happy?' he asked. No response. 'Have you ever met anyone who was happy?' he asked, and again no one answered. 'Have you ever heard of anyon who was happy?' the Presbyterian asked his audience. A lady rose in the middle of the house and said, 'From what I have heard, my husband's first wife was happy.'

"I am not perfectly happy myself to-night," he continued. "I have been excommunicated by the Presbyterian Ministers' Association, and if you notice that I halt in my utterance to-night you will know the cause of my uncontrollable grief. On the whole, it is better to use the arts of logic in an argument than the tricks of abuse.

"I never said anything against Protestants. I leave them entirely in the hands of God, and I hope that I shall meet them in a better land.

"The Presbyterian ministers say that I gave out a pronunciamento about the United States, although I have been here but two days. And before they had finished excommunicating me they gave out a pronunciamento about Spain and the countries of South America, in which hardly any of them ever spent two hours."

He went on to say that the Presbyterian ministers had condemned him for speaking about Protestantism in the United States because he arrived only two days ago, but they let Bishop Sellew escape. He is a Protestant Bishop who recently uttered some pessimistic beliefs about the vitality of Protestantism, and he had been here twenty years.

"When I spoke about Protestantism being in decay," went on Father Vaughan, "I was speaking about Protestantism as a spiritual power—as a power capable of building up a spiritually, supernaturally minded people—as a power capable of erecting a temple to God in the human soul. But the ministers say to me, 'Have you seen our great and glorious republic? Have you seen our skyscrapers? Our railroads? Our bridges? Our tubes? Our halls of commerce?' Of course I have. I was down in Wall Street this morning, and I put my money on the right horse, too.

"I reply, 'What proof is there in all this material wealth that Protestantism is a living, spiritual power. Why, the deader it is as a spiritual power the more likely are all these material things to be accomplished. The deader it is the more awake are human ambitions and human energies and human passions to go forward in the lines of material progress and to build mansions here on earth and to make men scoff at mansions in heaven.'

"But before I take leave of the Presbyterian ministers and go back to my own country, where, with my own eyes I witness how Protestantism is going, let me tell the association that there was a time when Italy, France, and Spain were great and prosperous nations, and when the South American republics, if not great, were at least happy nations—and this was at a time in those countries when the Catholic Church was free.

"Give back to her freedom in those lands. Loosen the bonds that Freemasonry and infidelity have thrown about her; give her in those countries a freedom that she has here amony you; give her a freedom that Protestantism has here; make allowance for mineral wealth and modern inventions, and then the Ministers' Association can discuss the subject of vitality with some appearance of logic and fairness—and for the sake of still greater fairness they may add a few reflections on the Catholic Belgium and its marvelous prosperity, and on the great central party in Germany, which because it is so intensely Catholic is so intensely patriotic."

Autoist Fined $100 and Costs.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Oct. 4.—Lawrence Darr, the son of George W. Darr of New York, to-day pleaded guilty to reckless driving of an automobile a week ago on Friday night, and was fined $100 and costs by Judge Burner. Darr with some New York members of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club left the club at 2 A. M. after a dinner given by his father, and when speeding on the Post Road the car left the roadway, jumped a curb, ran over a lawn, then across another road, and down an incline toward a brook, uprooting trees. The car was wrecked and a man's leg broken.

BRINGS FROM EUROPE EHRLICH'S REMEDY

Dr. Wolbarst Returns with a Supply of Preparation "606," Now a Celebrated Cure.

HE WILL MAKE MANY TESTS

Obtains the Arsenical Mixture on a Pledge to Report Every Experiment to the Discoverer.

Dr. A. L. Wolbarst of 105 East Nineteenth Street, accompanied by Mrs. Wolbarst, returned last night on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Dr. Wolbarst said that both he and Mrs. Wolbarst had been much refreshed by their trip. He brought with him a supply of Prof. Paul Ehrlich's discovery No. "606," which has been successful in more than 3,000 cases in curing a malady which has been the scourge of the human race for centuries.

Dr. Wolbarst has been intrusted with generous samples of the remedy to test its effect on patients in the United States. He said last night that he would use it principally in his hospital cases and on a few selected private cases. In discussing the preparation he said:

"Prof. Ehrlich's discovery is a preparation of arsenic. It is the result of fifteen years of study. Some years ago Prof. Ehrlich noticed that arsenic had a destructive effect on certain organisms in the blood, which appear in certain diseases, such as the sleeping sickness, malaria, and others.

"Prof. Ehrlich conceived the idea that these diseases might be successfully combatted with a preparation of arsenic sufficiently strong to kill the organisms, but not destructive in their effects upon the body.

"After numerous experiments he prepared a formula, his '606th,' which he tried at first on animals. Its results were successful, and he submitted it to several distinguished physicians of Berlin and other European cities, who tried it on upward of 3,000 cases. These cases convinced him that he had been successful in his search. The number of the preparation was a matter of chance. It might as well have been the 300th or the 900th experiment.

"While in Berlin I personally had the opportunity of observing the use of the treatment in some 300 cases. I saw the treatment administered and watched its effects. And before my departure Prof. Ehrlich gave me a supply, which I am going to use in my hospital practice and in some selected private cases.

"One of the conditions on which Prof. Ehrlich gave me this supply for use in America was that I should report the results back to him. In its use up to the present time the preparation has been successful in from 75 per cent. to 90 per cent. of cases.

"In cases where it is successfully used it accomplishes as much with one injection as has been possible in three or four years of treatment under other systems. There are, of course, some cases in which it does not succeed. But the successful ones are so startling as to be almost miraculous. This is especially true in cases that have resisted other treatment from four to five years.

"The preparation comes in the form of a powder, which is dissolved in a special manner, and then injected under the skin of the patient. The patient is put to bed for four or five days under observation, and in that time an improvement is noticed in most of the cases. In the successful ones the active symptoms of the disease disappear often within two to six weeks. But, inasmuch as the remedy has been employed for not more than one year, it is impossible to say yet whether these cases will remain cured permanently.

"There is no risk attached to the treatment of patients with the preparation. When it was first used four or five patients died, but this was due to unavoidable causes. Prof. Ehrlich's practice is not to administer the treatment to patients with weak hearts or bad kidneys, because in these cases its immediate effect is depressive. This is not true of normal cases.

"Dr. Ehrlich has been visited by medical men from all over the world, who besought him for supplies of his preparation. Most of them have gone away empty-handed. The discoverer does not want to give this medicine to the public until it has been tried on at least 10,000 cases; not until he has received reports from all over the world. He wants to have the widest possible reports on which to base a standard dosage, and it is determined that it is safe from all aspects to use his preparation for the purpose for which it is designed.

"There are only two or three men who have been commissioned by him to receive this preparation for America. When those have exhausted their supply and made their reports they will receive new supplies. The same procedure will be followed in other countries.

"The usefulness of this remedy is not alone to cure the disease for which it has been tested, but also to prevent the development in later years of serious affections of the mind and nervous system as well as locomtor ataxia and other forms of paralysis."

VANIMAN'S CAREER ONE OF ADVENTURE

Wellman's Associate in Ocean Flight Has Met Danger in Many Lands.

BALLOONING EVER HIS DREAM

Engineer Started Life as a Singer, and Graduated Into Aeronautics from Photography.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 4.—Melvin Vaniman, the young American engineer, who was once a teacher of music in Illinois College and is now busy twelve and sixteen hours a day preparing the airship America for her forthcoming effort to cross the Atlantic, on which Marconi wireless messages will be sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES, The Chicago Record-Herald, and The London Daily Telegraph, told a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day of adventures which carried him westward as a young man from the Middle Western town in which he was born on around the world to Paris and ended in his becoming a half-partner in a project to fly across the ocean.

Walter Wellman, the senior partner in the Wellman-Vaniman alliance, found on opening his mail this morning many press clippings poking fun at him and the trip he proposes to make. The clippings were remarkable for one quality, however—those from papers nearest the hangar where the America has been built up under Vaniman's care were not flippant in tone toward the enterprise. It was the Connecticut, Massachlusetts, and Southern papers that found only amusement in the enterprise. At Atlantic City papers had watched the America take shape, and had only praise for its builders and cautions to the public to wait for the bad weather to disappear before passing judgment on a project the details of which few could understand.

Wellman had an airship before he met Vaniman, but of that craft all that is left is a bit of canvas and silk cloth forming the forward part of the gas envelope and the cigar-shaped ends of the balloon. All the rest is Vaniman's handiwork, and it was seeing the serious young man in overalls toil overtime every day to get it properly assembled that converted those who have been on the ground from scoffers to enthusiastic supporters of the enterprise.

It was a chance reference to the aeroplane accident of Clifford B. Harmon, in which he smashed his Farman biplane for something like the fifth time, that started Vaniman on account of his remarkable career as music teacher, opera singer, actor, photographer, balloonist, aeroplane builder, and inventor of a definite type of dirigible balloon and balloon hangar.

The Fault of Aeroplanes.

"I'm not at all surprised that Harmon smashed his biplane," Vaniman said, "and, what's more, it's not his fault. He has struck a fundamental, deep and permanent, limitation of the aeroplane. At least I believe so, and if I didn't I'd never be here working on a dirigible, but would be building giant aeroplanes instead. I did that once. I did it before ever it had been let out that the Wrights had flown. I built a machine and I flew it, too. Flying it was easy, but landing was different. The story of that aeroplane was a continued round of flights, smashes on alighting, and then long periods of making repairs.

"What did I call it? The Antoinette, and it was up in the air a long time before the present Antoinette monoplane had ever been thought of. In fact, the Antoinette of to-day might have been my product if I hadn't met Wellman and gone off to Spitzbergen. The motor I put in it was a twenty-five horse-power affair I secured from Levassor, who was then a maker of motors, and not of the Antoinette monoplane. He liked my machine so much, he said, he would give me the motor called the Antoinette free if I'd give that name to my giant monoplane. I agreed, and so the first Antoinette was made.

"No, it wasn't the same that does the flying to-day. It was a failure. I was just preparing to alter my first set of plans over which I had consulted much with Levavassor, when the North Pole project came up, and I let it go. Levavassor took up with other experimenters and the Antoinette of to-day was the result.

"As for me, I had built a dirigible already for what do you think? To take photographs above Paris and Rome and I had though the aeroplane would better do the work. I found I was deceived, turned back to the dirigible, and here after three years you have this craft and the trans-Atlantic sailing plan."

Mr. Vaniman was asked about the satirical comments that had been published about the Wellman attempt to fly to the North Pole. Mr. Vaniman's eyes lighted up at the questions.

"But you should have been with us," he said, "on those six sweet hours when we were headed direct for the pole, with a fine fifteen-mile breeze directly behind us and our motors churning out fifteen miles more, giving us a going gait of thirty miles in all.

"We were a happy crew that day. We started out in the morning, and as the sun began to flare back from the polar ice pack after a morning snowstorm had eased up, our balloon began to rise. Soon it was so far up that none of the big leather trailer was on the ice pack over which we wished to keep a part of it dragging. We didn't mind, though, and we sailed along, all mighty happy to think our long campaign of preparation had ended at last with such success.

"Say, if anybody ever thought he had the pole within his grasp it was our skipper on that glorious day. Then all at once, puff! we were off our level keel, and were shooting high above the clouds.

"I tugged at the gas valve till I dared to let no more out, and then I found we had ceased to rise. A line we had out forward was what was pulling our nose down, and this Loud and I shifted aft in two hours of hard work. Our leather trailer was packed full of food, and had torn loose just a yard or two from the balloon car. Disappointed—well, we had worked in Spitzbergen a whole Summer on that balloon, and do you think we were doing it just for the love of it, and not the cruise it was meant to prepare for?

"Now, we turned our balloon around in the air and fought the wind. That's how I know this craft we have here'll fight the wind. We sailed backward and made good headway for several hours. Then we reached the open polar sea and saw a steamship which had put out to meet us, having seen us coming back through the air. The wind had freshened in the meantime, and we thought a tow to the steamer would be a first-class thing. But the airship wouldn't tow. She shot off to each side and ran wild generally. So we dropped her to the surface of the water, to see if she'd tow there. She broke the tow rope, and shed her steel car, too. But the envelope, the engines, and all that was worth saving of the car we towed back along the coast to our balloon shed, and that was the end of our trial to get to the north pole.

"I have those same engines here, part of the same envelopes and part of the same gasoline tank. It was while building that craft that the best thought I ever had about dirigibles came to me. In earlier plans we had always figured on how to throw things away. We had built gasoline tanks to be emptied and heaved overboard, and one night I woke up in my sleep with a jump that threw me out of bed. It had dawned upon me that the last thing we wanted to throw away was stuff that weighed. That we would be constantly using up gasoline, which would be loss of weight, and if we didn't get something to replace it we'd be soaring away to the moon or some equally reasonable place in anything like a long trip.

"From that moment I began to work on the present type of airship. I determined to build the gasoline tank as the backbone of the ship, the base of the triangular car, and to make it of heavy steel. Since the first effort on that line I have shortened the tank somewhat, but otherwise the America is as the thought came to me that night."

Invented Russian Hangar.

Mr. Vaniman spoke in French to his Parisian mechanics while he was running over the events leading up to the America's construction. That was because of his years of work in aeroplane and dirigible building abroad. He has letters from the Russian Government commending his plans for a dirigible balloon shed, the first example of which now stands just outside of St. Petersburg. He planned the shed while in Spitzbergen trying to get to the pole in 1907. The plan was worked out in steel and canvas, and turned over to 100 Russian soldiers for use in the army manoeuvres, it being possible to erect the shed or dismantle it within six hours. Two others have since been built for France, and now house the French dirigibles when in the field.

Among his other trophies are gold medals received at the St. Louis Exposition for the best photographic exhibit, a set of views of New Zealand, made on a Government commission.

The bulletins from Director Willis Moore still give warnings of bad weather, and the America's crew is waiting. On the first trip aloft it will be necessary to swing the airship to every point of the compass on its own power in order to make compass adjustments. After that work is done the kind of weather in which she ventures out will not be so important. It is now thought likely that she may get away for Europe the latter part of this week.

The long, dry grass near the Wellman balloon America took fire this evening and for a time threatened to set fire to the balloon hanger. Cottagers joined others in the fight to put the fire out, and it was conquered before it reached the balloon shed.

SHRIVER BREAKS HIS ANKLE.

Aviator Unable to Shut Off Power When His Biplane Hits the Ground.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 4.—After having been in the air five hundred feet for more than half an hour, Tod C. Shriver met with a serious accident at 6 o'clock this evening, when his biplane "Night Hawk," that broke the world's record for night flying, struck the ground with force at the Delaware Horse Show Park. Shriver was unable to shut off the engine and the impact was so severe that the machine turned four complete somersaults, throwing Shriver thirty-five feet.

Shriver's only serious injury was a fractured left ankle, but he was badly shaken up. The biplane was wrecked. The aviator was removed to the Delaware Hospital in the automobile of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred I. Du Pont, who witnessed the accident. The physicians announced to-night that the victim had no complications.

Shriver was not knocked unconscious, and when picked up by spectators he declared he would go up to-morrow. This is very improbable, however. He was engaged to give flights under the auspices of the Wilmington Aero Club from to-morrow until Saturday. John J. Frisby, another aviator who has his machine here, probably will take his place.

Shriver arrived here with his biplane yesterday. He made his first practice flight successfully yesterday afternoon and it was late this afternoon when he was ready for the second flight.

The machine made a radius of a dozen miles, the aviator making dips and soaring through the air in a manner that evoked much applause. When ready to descend, he came down gracefully and prepared to alight at a given spot. Then the spectators saw that he could not control the engine. Instead of alighting easily the biplane struck the ground with an impact that was heard all over the park.

Shriver explained that the machine skipped, but whatever else it did the biplane turned over and over and then landed in a heap, pitching the aviator clear of the débris.

The flights were to have been given in connection with a presentation of a $10,000 silver service to the Battleship Delaware to-morrow and a big firemen's parade Thursday.

FIX ON FIRST LAP OF TIMES AIR RACE

Contestants Will Use Suburban Route in Start from Chicago for New York.

TO CHART ROUTE TO TOLEDO

Then Aviators Will Follow Railroad Tracks Eastward—Rain Prevents Exhibition Flights.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Delay in the arrival of supplies necessary to erect signals at difficult points along the proposed route over which will fly the airmen who are to start on Saturday in a race to New York for the $25,000 prize of THE NEW YORK TIMES and The Chicago Evening Post, the $5,000 offered by Clifford B. Harmon, and prizes accruing from the exhibitions this week at Hawthorne race track, prevented the pathfinding automobile which is to precede the fliers from leaving on schedule time to-day. The start, instead, will be made to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock.

Jerome S. Fanciulli, who now practically holds the post of topographical expert to the fliers and who will be in command of the pathfinder, in which will travel also a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES and The Chicago Evening Post, spent the day, however, in laying out a course over which the racers can fly out of Chicago. Of the whole trip the aviators have feared that the stretch immediately after the fliers leave the Hawthorne race track and until they reach the Lake Shore Railroad tracks would be one of the worst with which the aviators will have to deal.

Fanciulli to-day solved this problem, for he plotted a route which will lead the racers from the Hawthorne track to Aetna, Ind., where they will find themselves over the Lake Shore tracks, with practically good flying all the way. That is to say, their route will take them over few houses and fewer trees or clumps of trees. Practically they will be flying over unobstructed prairie for almost the whole route up to the Lake Shore tracks.

The magnitude of the task of finding and marking such an unobstructed line can be appreciated only by those who are familiar with Chicago and its environs. A maze of railroad tracks cover the territory to the south and west of the city, and almost at every switch along the whole way a factory rears its tall chimneys into the lower air lanes, obstructing these and filling those above with treacherous currents which the air men fear. To pick a thirty-three-mile route to Aetna which should avoid every one of these obstructions was a task that employed Fanciulli's whole afternoon.

As finally settled, the route will start at the south side of the Hawthorne track, where the aviators will jump the fence, cross the drainage canal, and set off in a southeasterly direction. Their course will carry them over the outskirts of the city, where there are few houses, and these all low structures. Mostly the flying will be over clear ground, with plenty of opportunities for a sudden landing.

South Englewood, seven and one-half miles away, will be the first signal point. Here the aviators must veer a little more to the east to reach Oakdale, twelve miles from Chicago, and to prevent their following a wrong course a patch of white cheesecloth, fifty or seventy-five feet square, will be stretched over the grass in a large field near the railroad tracks. The patch of white will be visible from any height that they may fly, say the airmen.

Once more the trend is east after Oakdale is reached, and a mile flight will bring the racers over Burnside, thirteen miles from Chicago.

At Burnside begins the best of the flying. The course follows the east shore of Lake Calumet as far as Burnham, seventeen and one-half miles away. For the whole distance there is nothing beneath the aviators but green fields, some of them of a swampy nature, but all suitable for landing and restarting. Oakdale, Burnside, and Burnham will be marked with signals similar to that at South Englewood, although smudge fires may be used also.

From the southeastern end of Lake Calumet the route takes a twist to the southeast again and crosses the southern end of Wolf Lake, a small body of water to the north of Hammond, Ind. A signal station will be established at Douglas Park, just at the end of the lake and between it and Lake George, another small sheet of water, which almost joins with Wolf Lake. Thence on to Aetna the airmen will have only to follow the same general direction, with nothing beneath them but clear fields.

The Pathfinder will take up its task to-morrow, from Aetna, and before night falls it is hoped that the route plotters will have reached Elkhart, 101 miles from Chicago. Thursday should find them in Stryker, 187 miles from the start, and by Friday forenoon they hope to reach Toledo, 234 miles from Chicago. Here the trip will end, as Glenn H. Curtiss is authority for the statement that further route plotting would be useless.

"From Toledo on," says Mr. Curtiss, "the racers have only to follow the tracks. I am familiar with the section of the country between Toledo and Erie, and the course along the railroad's right of way is as good as could be found. From Erie on I fear that the course again will have to be plotted, at least as far as Albany."

Wind and rain prevented exhibition flights at the Hawthorne track to-day.

HAMILTON OFF TO MINEOLA.

Aviator Will Try Out His Monoplane There for International Meet.

Charles K. Hamilton arrived in New York yesterday and will at once begin preparations for the international aviation meet at Belmont Park, Oct. 22 to 30. Hamilton's 110-horse-power Hamiltonian monoplane is now at the aviation grounds at Mineola, L. I., and the aviator will establish himself at Mineola to-morrow.

Hamilton is still suffering from the accident which befell him on the Pacific Coast. He hobbled around with the assistance of a cane, owing to his left leg being weak from the effect of the hot oil which poured over him when his machine struck the ground. Hamilton's face still bears the marks of the accident, and is bruised and scratched, while his jawbone, which was fractured, is slowly mending.

With his new high-powered motor Hamilton expects to make remarkable time in the race for the international aviation championship. Before his accident Hamilton tried out his new machine, and although he ran under two-thirds speed, he covered a mile over a three-lap track in 40 seconds. He is very optimistic over his prospects for the international race, and expects, if his machine holds together, to cover the 66-mile course at an average of 70 miles an hour.

For the first week Hamilton will not attempt to fly his new machine at any special speed. He will do experimental work for several days and then make short flights of less than a mile. In his weakened condition Hamilton feels that he should conserve his strength for the big event of the international meeting, which he believes he will win.

Hamilton's principal concern is his inability to take part in THE NEW YORK TIMES-Chicago Evening Post flight from Chicago to New York, which starts from the former city on Saturday. After leaving Sacramento Hamilton suffered an attack of pleurisy, but felt equal to the task of flying from Chicago to New York. His machine was assembled at the Hawthorne race track, and Hamilton paid a visit of inspection the day following his arrival in Chicago. The damp ground caused a relapse and he was confined to his room for several days and reluctantly abandoned his plans for the long flight. In discussing the Chicago-New York trip last night he said:

"It was the greatest disappointment of my career to give up the flight from Chicago to New York. After my flight for THE NEW YORK TIMES from New York to Philadelphia and return I felt that the trip from Chicago would not be a serious proposition. I did not underestimate the difficulties of the journey, and was fully prepared for them. I felt certain that my machine would carry me the entire distance, and had made all arrangements to provide for contingencies for the trip.

"To fly from Chicago to New York will be the greatest achievement of the age, and there is no reason why, with favorable weather conditions, that one or more of the contestants should not complete the distance. The territory is favorable for the contest, and although there are certain stretches of country that may tax the nerve and ability of the contestants, the territory on the whole is rather favorable to the contest. There are a number of dangerous cross currents and treacherous winds at certain points of the route, but there are many favorable landing places where a contestant can land in case of necessity.

"No event in the history of aviation has created such interest as the Chicago-New York race, and the event will be watched with interest by every person interested in the science throughout the world, and the one regret that I have is that I am unable to take part in the contest."

BROOKINS UP 1,800 FEET.

Aviator Flies in 25-Mile Breeze and Is Nearly Upset.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Oct. 4.—In a twenty-five-mile gale that swept across the aviation field here to-day Walter Brookins in a Wright biplane went up 1,800 feet, exceeding his flight of yesterday by 800 feet.

Thousands attending the town's centennial celebration stood speechless when the aviator was about 1,000 feet up, and was caught by a gust of wind. The machine dipped and plunged downward about 100 feet before it was righted. The aviator later landed safely.

FLIES OVER THE PYRENEES.

M. Tabuteau Ascends at San Sebastian and Lands at Biarritz.

BIARRITZ, Oct. 4.—M. Tabuteau made a splendid flight over the Pyrenees from Spain to France last evening.

The aviator rose at San Sebastian, and, directing his course between the lofty peaks of Haya and Paizquibel, followed the valley of the River Bidassoa to tne sea, over which he passed to Biarritz.

WYNMALEN ROSE 9,186 FEET.

Official Figures of the World Altitude Record That He Made.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The new world's record for altitude in an aeroplane, recently established by Henri Wynmalen at Mourmelon, has been officially recognized by the Aero Club of France.

The new figures are a shade better than those originally given out, as Wynmalen is now credited with having reached an altitude of 9,186 feet.

Grahame-White Flies at a Fair.

BROCKTON, Mass., Oct. 4.—An exhibition in a Farman biplane by Claude Grahame-White and the usual harness racing events were features of the opening day of the thirty-seventh annual fair to-day. On account of the high wind Grahame-White was unable to attempt a flight until after sundown, and he remained in the air only seven minutes.

Brookins's Flight Is Called Off.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4.—The proposed flight of Walter Brookins from Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis next Saturday was peremptorily called off by the Aero Club of St. Louis to-night, following a disagreement with the Springfield Fair Association.

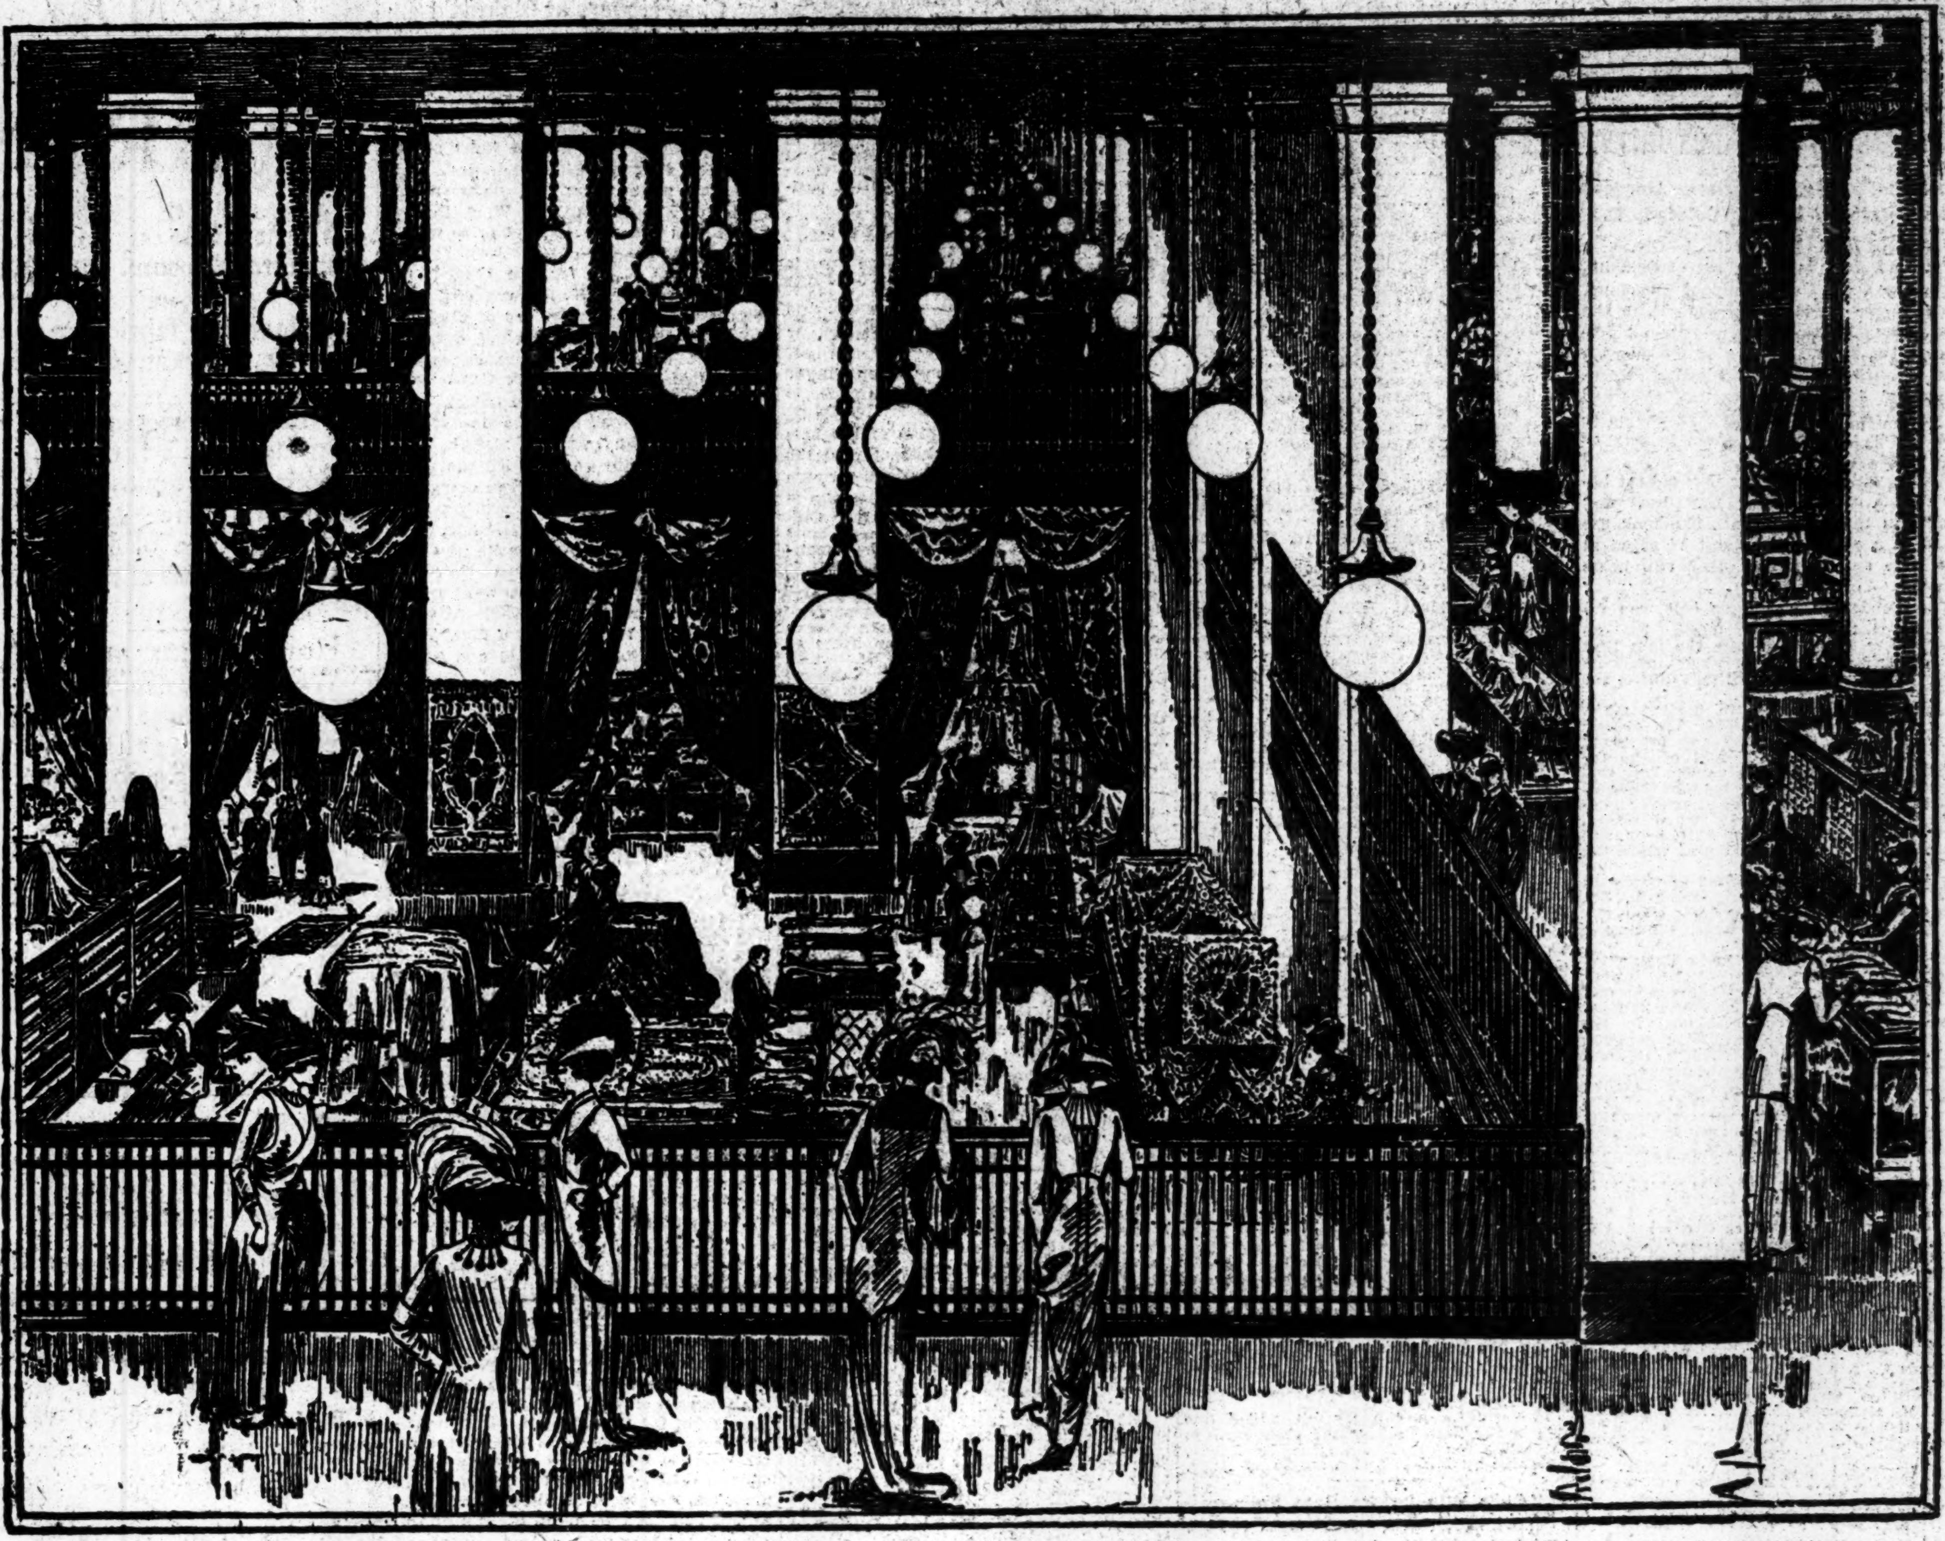
The "Subway Store" at Gimbels

Two Stories High, Below the Street Level



This Subway Store Is So Totally Unlike Any Other in the World that You Will Never Realize that You Are in a Basement at All

When we planned the Gimbel Store we spent months over the problem of making a Basement Salesroom as bright and cheery as any above-ground section.

With the help of the ablest architects in America we succeeded.

Gone are the low-hanging ceilings, the dim lights, the deep shadows, the stuffy atmosphere and the musty corners of the old-fashioned basement.

Gone are the old-fashioned methods of basement merchandising----the collection of odds and ends and unpleasant trash; the slipshod, careless service----the general air of "cheapness" pushed to its worst.

You will look in vain for any of these at Gimbels.

Ours is a big, bright, handsome store----of TWO selling floors, occupying a space of over one hundred and fifty thousand square feet.

Powerful pumps, working through an elaborate ventilation system, change the air in the Subway Store completely, every ten to twelve minutes. Even with the throngs of the past few days, the air is always as pure as it is outside and the temperature never more than four degrees higher----a triumph in ventilating engineering.

And in the Subway Store you will find broad varieties of almost all lines of merchandise carried in the upper floors duplicated in the less expensive grades—every penny's worth Reliable, every penny's worth a full measure of value; every ounce and inch of it good, clean, inexpensive—but worth having.

The same service, the same ideals, the same standards prevail in the "Subway Store," as elsewhere in this house, and everything in it is NEW.

TWENTY-FIVE HITS IN HILLTOP GAME

Knight's Long Double with Bases Filled Keeps Yankees in Second Place in the Race.

Twenty-five hits, ranging all the way from infield scratches to healthy wallops for three sacks, were poled out on the Hilltop yesterday in the final game of the closing series between the Yankees and Senators. Both teams went after opposing slabmen with a vengeance and the honors were about even in quantity of bingles, but the Hilltoppers were a trifle more timely in leaning against the ball and they finished in front with a good lead. The score was 8 to 5. As the Tigers were not able to play their scheduled game with the Naps, the victory gives the Yanks a tighter grip on second place.

Each team had to change pitchers during the battle and in neither case did the change cut any figure in the slugfest. Quinn lasted six innings on the Yankee mound and during that time his delivery was dented for nine safe wallops. In the sixth he was reached for three clean clouts which put the Senators dangerously close to the Yanks and Manager Chase displaced him. Before Warhop had a chance to take up the burden Jack Knight had put the game away with a clean-up double when all the corners were occupied. Warhop had little trouble in the last three innings, but his benders were found for three hits.

Manager McAleer trotted out a stranger to local fans in the person of Pitcher Moyer and he did not stay long enough to become acquainted. He lasted until two were out in the third inning and in that short time he had bounded the ball off Yankee ribs three times and had given one pass, besides being hit for three singles and a triple. Lefty Otey furnished the floaters for the last six innings and his southpaw crossfire delivery proved no terror to the Yankees.

The Senators got a single and a double in their half of the opening inning, but failed to count, as Milan, who had contributed the one-base wallop, had been picked off first base before Cunningham's two-sacker arrived. The Yanks got a run in their half. Moyer filled the sacks by passing Daniels and hitting Hemphill and Knight, and Gardner's long fly to Ralston allowed Daniels to score. Cree lined to centre field for a single and Milan's throw to the plate nailed Hemphill. The Senators died without a struggle in the second inning, and then the Yanks chased in three runs. Austin dropped a single into centre field and advanced while Summerlott was tagging Mitchell after his slow roller along the first base line. A balk put him up another peg and he counted on Quinn's fast drive past Cunningham. Daniels was hit, Hemphill flied to Schaefer, and Wolter hit to deep centre for three bases, scoring Quinn and Daniels. Otey succeeded Moyer at this stage and ended the inning by fanning Knight.

The Senators got their first run in the third inning. Henry was safe when Wolter dropped his pop fly after slipping, Otey fanned, and Milan scratched a single past Quinn. Knight grabbed Lelivelt's grounder and got Henry at third base, Milan reaching second. Cunningham singled past short and Milan counted. The Yanks died easy in their half, although Gardner led off with a single, and the fourth was a scoreless round. Each team scored once in the fifth inning. With one out in Washington's half Otey hit over Daniels's head for three cushions and scored on Milan's out, Gardner to Wolter. Knight's single, Gardner's sacrifice and Cree's safe wallop to right centre field brought in the Yankee run.

The sixth was a busy inning for both teams. With one out Summerlott hit past Knight and he finished the distance on Schaefer's drive which rolled past Cree and to the fence for three sacks. Schaefer scored on Ralston's line drive to centre field which Cree's fast fielding held to a single. It looked good for three cushions. In New York's half Daniels's double, a hit batsman and Chase's infield hit filled the bases and Knight cleaned up with a drive to left field for two bases. Henry's single and steal and Cunningham's third hit gave the Senators their final run in the seventh inning.

GRACE'S $14,000 FUTURITY.

Cleveland Filly Surprises Harness Horsemen by Beating Colorado E.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 4.—Grace, a filly, by Peter the Great, out of Orianna, owned by Capt. David Shaw of Cleveland, Ohio, to-day defeated Colorado E. in the Kentucky Futurity three-year-old division, the $14,000 feature of the opening day of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association meeting. Colorado E. won the first heat, but was unable to get better than second place in any of the others.

Grace, which had never won a heat before, was third in the first heat and fourth in the second heat. She took the third in a phenomenal burst of speed at the wire and won the other two heats handily.

The Bondsman McGregor colt was favorite for the trotting classic. No excuses were offered, despite the fact that he has won almost everything that came his way over the Grand Circuit during the present season.

Colorado E., running in perfect style, won the first heat in 2:08¼. The second heat, however, awakened the crowd to the possibility of the defeat of the favorite when Emily Ellen came along and won from Colorado E. in the slow time of 2:09¼. The big surprise, however, occurred in the third heat, when Grace, which eventually won the race, managed to stick her nose in front and made the mile in 2:08.

The fourth heat also went to Grace in the slowest time of the race, 2:10, but the filly demonstrated her class when she came back in the fifth heat, winning it and the race.

W. B. Chisholm's bay mare Evelyn W. captured the Tennessee Stake, worth $3,025, winning the first, second, and fourth heats. Her best time was 2:04½.

Beauty Wilkes was displaced in the first heat of the 2:08 pace in a collision with Dillon Queen, Independence Boy, and Fred F. on the turn into the stretch.

The 2:05 trot, scheduled for to-morrow, was declared off. Three heats of the 2:08 pace were decided, Independence Boy taking two of them. Harry McK. won the first. It will be finished to-morrow. The summaries:

EVERS BACK IN CHICAGO.

Says Zimmerman Will Be World's Series Surprise.

Johnny Evers, the Cubs' second baseman, who broke one of the bones in his right foot in the game with Cincinnati last Saturday, is now in the West Side Hospital Chicago, with his injured foot bandaged in blankets and ice packs.

According to Evers, the accident which has put him out of commission is one that might happen to any player, no mater how careful he might be. Johnny says he was on second base, when Hofman singled to centre, and as soon as he saw the ball was going safe he started for home. He says he did not know where the ball was, and as he neared the plate he started to slide. Johnny says he did not a foot after he hit the ground. His cleats caught in the hard earth and his foot turned at right angles.

"It was an unfortunate accident," says Evers. "I wanted to play in the coming world's series more than in the others, but I feel sure that Heinie Zimmerman will be able to fill my place. I have a feeling he wil lbe the surprise of the series, and am sure he will do some hitting off Bender and Coombs, while he will be somewhat better than me against the left-handers Plank and Krause.

"I will be laid up for at least eight weeks. The bone, when it heals, will be as strong as ever, but the muscles and ligaments are torn so badly that it will be a long time before I will be able to use the leg. I want to get out in the air, and I am told I may possibly walk around on crutches in ten days. If this is true, I will be one of the most interested spectators at the world's series, and will be pulling for Zimmerman all the time. I think the Cubs will beat the Athletics in decisive fashion, as the pitchers are in good shape and the players feel sure they can annex another world's championship.

"While I was sitting on the ground in Cincinnati and looknig at my ankle the first person I noticed when I looked up was Hank O'Day. As soon as he realized how badly I was hurt he turned and walked away with a saddened look upon his face. That night while I was lying in bed at the hotel Umpire Brennan came up to my room and told me my injury had unsettled Hank. Brennan said O'Day coudl not eat his dinner nor smoke a cigar, and I knew things must be pretty bad when Hank can't smoke."

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 4.—The Giants made horseplay of the last game with Boston, hammering four pitchers all over the lot until the Boston fielders and the handful of spectators alike were tired of the burlesque. From start to finish it was a fusillade of base hits. Snodgrass alone failed to connect with the ball, but his work in the centre garden and on the bases atoned for this lapse, his assist off Burke in the sixth inning being particularly noteworthy.

The game is hardly worth describing in detail. It was 6 to 7 when the sixth inning began, for the Doves had been smashing Crandall to good effect. Then the Giants scored seven additional runs. Merkle began with a homer over the left field fence, which tied the score. Then Wilson singled to centre and Crandall walked, but Wilson was caught off second, Rariden to Sweeney. Devore was hit by a pitched ball. Doyle doubled to left, scoring Crandall. Snodgrass walked. Murray singled to centre, scoring Devore and Doyle. Murray stole. Bridwell walked. Devlin singled past short, Snodgrass scoring. Merkle flied to Collins, Murray scoring. Wilson walked. Crandall singled to centre, scoring Bridwell. Devlin also tried to score, but was out, Goode to Rariden. Wasn't that awful?

In the ninth inning the Giants ran their score up to 17 by a brilliant display of place hitting in which Wilson, Crandall, Devore, Doyle, and Becker starred. Four of the Doves hit Crandall's delivery in the very first inning, and in the third they made their six in this fashion:

Beck's slam bounded over Doyle's head for a hit. Miller scratched a hit Bridwell's way. Sweeney sacrificed and reached second, when Crandall hit him in the back, but the umpire called him out for interference, sending Beck, who had crossed the plate, back to second base. Burg walked. Rariden popped to Doyle and Beck raced home, when Doyle took a nap. Frock singled over Doyle's head and sat down on first base, while Doyle kicked the ball about long enough to score Miller and Burg.

Two singles and a fly hit added one run in the fifth inning, and their runs in the ninth were due to a triple by Goode, a double by Miller, and a single by Burg.

Cubs Win Before Rain Falls.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 4.—The Chicago team to-day played its last game of the season on the local grounds, winning 3 to 2 in a five-inning contest. The game was called in the last half of the sixth inning on account of rain, after Chicago had scored an additional run in its half. Score:

Jack Atkin Wins $10,000 Handicap.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Barney Schreiber's Jack Atkin, quoted at 10 to 1 in the books, won the $10,000 Dominion Handicap at Fort Erie to-day. Olambala, the favorite, carried a lot of money, but with bad racing luck could do no better than third. Jack Atkin took the lead in the first furlong and was never headed.

MORNINGSTAR COMES BACK.

Takes Second Game of Match with Hoppe by Score of 430 to 382.

Ora Morningstar won last night's game in the series of six contests of 18.1 balkline billiards which he is playing with William Hoppe, the champion, this week at Daly's billiard academy. This was the second game of the series, and resulted in a score of 430 points for Morningstar and 382 points for Hoppe in 41 frames. The champion, however, is still in the lead on account of his victory Monday night, when he made 400 to Morningstar's 137. At the end of last night's play the score was: Hoppe, 800; Morningstar, 567.

Hoppe accomplished little up to the tenth inning last night, his total score at this point being 61, as against 101 for Morningstar. His highest run had been only 13, whereas his opponent ran 41 in his second inning. But this depression did not last long, for during the next five innings some of his old form returned to Hoppe, and in the sixteenth round he made a run of 38 that put him ahead by a majority of 29. He fell down, however, in the eighteenth by making no score, and Morningstar ran 12, which brought him up to 178. From here on Hoppe was out of it, and never again regained the lead.

Morningstar's average was 10 30-40, while Hoppe's was 9 13-41. The latter made the highest run, which was 47. Morningstar's was 46. Morningstar received a great amount of applause after making several extremely difficult shots, and the crowd seemed to favor his style of play more than that of Hoppe, although the latter exhibited great skill in his control of the balls on long shots, and experienced no trouble in bringing them close together again and in perfect position.

OLDRING SHOCKS GRIFF.

Yankees' Manager Angry When Player Is Secured by Connie Mack.

Many of the young players of the new American League champions entered the arena of major league baseball through devious and peculiar ways. Especially is this more plain in the case of Rube Oldring, who delivered a solar plexus blow to Clarke Griffith, who was then manager of the Yankees.

The White Plains boy, who became a converted outfielder after he was a star third-sacker, tells this interesting story:

"After we finished the Southern League season at Montgomery I came home to New York. One Sunday the Manhattan Field Club was due to play the Yankees. I thought I'd take in the game, so I went to the grounds. I hardly got inside the gate before the manager of the field club saw me and ran over and said: 'Rube, you're just the fellow I'm looking for.'

"He told me he was shy a third-baseman. He offered me a good day's pay, so I took the job in a minute. I played the game of my life. It seems I couldn't miss them at third, and every time I hit the ball I must have put a dent in it. The field club won by 4 to 3, and Griff came after me. He said he wanted me to play with the Yankees for the balance of the season. I knew that I had been drafted by Connie Mack, but I went on the trip with the Yankees and played pretty good ball.

"One night while the team was in Boston Griff said he had sent in a draft for me, and that he was going to play me at third the next season. 'Oh, no, you're not,' I told him, 'because Connie Mack has drafted me.' He almost had a hemorrhage when he heard it, and I stuck it out for a week and then quit the team. Then I went to Philadelphia with the Athletics. But I'll never forget how Griff looked when he found Connie had snared me."

WOMEN GOLFERS IN TOURNAMENT

Mrs. Bird and Mrs. Frayne Win Chief Honors at Plainfield Country Club.

Women golfers from various sections of the metropolitan district gathered for a one-day tournament on the links of the Plainfield Country Club yesterday.

In the main event, an eighteen-hole medal play handicap, Mrs. W. S. Bird of Dunwoodie won the first net prize with a card of 98—18—80.

There was a tie for the second net prize between Mrs. W. R. Frayne of Dunwoodie and Miss M. Goddard of the home club. The first named received a 12 and the other a 14 stroke allowance, and as it was getting late the committee ordered the pair to settle their deadlock in a three-hole play-off, Miss Goddard to receive one stroke from the visitor. This resulted favorably to Mrs. Frayne.

The prize for the best gross score was captured by the rapidly improving player, Mrs. F. H. Hayes of Midland, who reeled off an even 90, despite the fact that she had never played over the course before. Mrs. Hayes went out in 48 and home in 42. Two Englewood women, Mrs. L. W. Callan and Mrs. T. H. Polhemus, went around in 91 and 92, respectively.

After the handicap came an approaching and putting contest, which ended in a tie for first and second prizes between Mrs. H. L. Patterson of Baltusrol and Miss M. Von Boskerck of Plainfield. Both had scores of 9. On the play-off Mrs. Patterson won with 13. The scores in the handicap were as follows:

YALE FOOTBALL MEN IN SECRET PRACTICE

Capt. Daly to Keep Gates Closed Nearly Every Day During Practice Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 4.—Without a note of warning secret practice was sprung on the Yale football squad this afternoon. It was not decided upon until just before the squad left for the afternoon drill, and the fact that Harvard closed her football gates yesterday may have had something to do with it. It has evidently come to stay, for Capt. Daly said after the drill that the gates would be closed three or four days every week until the close of the season.

Capt. Daly believes that the players need long and constant drill in the formations made possible by the new rules, and it will be Yale's plan to use the simple, old-fashioned formations in the game as long as possible, drill the new formations in secret and save them for the important games. This afternoon they were tried behind closed gates in the first scrimmaging since the Syracuse game Saturday. No announcement was made of the secret practice except that it lasted ten minutes and was followed by a long punting drill, and that few of the regular players took part. To-morrow's lineup for game with Tufts, which will close Yale's Wednesday games, indicates that no veterans will be sent into the play for Yale, even Capt. Daly retiring.

"Pop" Corey will run the eleven. Greeley will be tried in Daly's place, and York, a promising new lineman, will be used at guard in place of Paul. Reilly will go back to the end of line. He played full back Saturday. Coates will take Kilpatrick's place at left end.

Foster Sanford took charge of the linemen for a long breaking-through drill this afternoon. Other coaches here were Jack Owsley, Burr Chamberlin, George Adee, Fred Murphy, and Frank Butterworth.

Childs, tackle last season, has regained his eligibility and joined the squad to-day. Capt. Daly has decided to have Dr. Leonard Sanford, the team's surgical expert, with the squad at the field every day this season.

HARVARD CLOSES GATES, TOO

Long Scrimmage Held in Which First Team Beats the Second Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 4.—The football practice at Soldiers' Field was secret again to-day and will be so again to-morrow, then open for the remainder of the week. The Williams College game is to be played next Saturday and the first eleven, frequently changed, went through one of the most serious afternoon's work it has yet had. Head Coach Haughton was not on hand and John Cutler, the quarter back of the eleven that laid Yale low two years ago, directed the work.

There was a lengthy scrimmage session against the second eleven. The latter was in more aggresive form than it has been, furnishing better opposition for the first eleven, but the latter made two touchdowns and a goal from placement. Wulsin, guard on the second eleven, gave promise of future usefulness by his breaking through and spilling first team plays.

Straight football prevailed during the scrimmaging, but onside kicks and forward passing figured in the scoring. T. Frothingham made a rush for a touchdown after an onside kick had been recovered on the second team's ten yard line. The backfield was then changed to Potter, Pierce, Morrison and Tyron, but did not get along any too well. Wigglesworth and the Frothinghams were brought back into action and the latter kicked the field goal from the 35-yard mark.

There was a third string of backs in the line-up when the second touchdown was made. Wendell made it following an onside kick and a forward pass. Wendell played better as he warmed up. He is fast and heavy. Keays, another recruit from last year's freshman squad, did well at guard. Bob Fisher did not take part in the scrimmaging, but did some kicking. Corbell, who has a lame hand, was not in uniform, but practiced kicking.

Practice Resumed at West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 4.—To-day the plain presented its usual busy appearance with the numerous football men divided into squads under Lieut. Henry M. Nelly, head coach, and his assistants, trying to catch up on the ground lost during the Cadets' enforced idleness since the Capt. Longan "silence" incident. Needless to say, there is joy among the adherents of the team who lined the gridiron that the little unpleasantness is settled so far as football is concerned, and there need now be felt no uneasiness as to the fulfillment of the remainder of the schedule. The team, of course, has gone back some during the eight days they were forbidden to practice, and there is now only one game in which to test their knowledge of the new rules before they face Yale. The daily parade which was ordered during the Cadets' punishment last week, has again been discontinued, and although the regular drills which take place daily will continue, the men are able to get much more time to practice. Lieut. Nelly took the men back to the rudiments of the game to-day, and the tackling dummy was again brought into prominence. The ends practiced handling the forward pass, but they judged the throws poorly. Dean and Kern did some fine punting to give the ends practice getting down the field. Lieut. Pullen kept the line men busy working through the formations that had been already partly learned.

Middies Struggling for Places.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 4.—Several important changes were made in the line-up of the Naval Academy football team this afternoon, and the strongest competition for places in both the line and backfield that has been seen here for years is now going on. Merring, who has played a strong game at tackle on the first and second teams for three seasons, was tried at left guard. Sewell played at left half most of the afternoon, and Brown, the big fourth classman, was at right end. The work of Sewell was very good, and his line hitting netted several long gains. He is the stockiest of all the candidates for the back field.

The work this afternoon included twenty minutes of the hardest kind of a contest between the first and second teams, spirit being given to the play by the fact that all the positions on the team are still open. Dalton made the only touchdown of the afternoon.

The second team was then given the ball, and the regulars charged so promptly and so hard that the result of at least twelve attempts by the second team's backs was a loss of several yards.

Hart Speedy Getting Under Punts.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, Oct. 4.—The Princeton football team went through light practice this afternoon in preparation for the Villa Nova game to-morrow. There was no scrimmage, but the 'Varsity practiced punting and blocking. Capt. Hart developed great speed in getting down under punts. MacGregor, a tackle of last year, who has been out of the game because of pneumonia, had his first workout with the scrubs. It is thought that he will take his place in the 'Varsity line soon.

Princeton's line-up for to-morrow's game will probably be as follows: Blumenthal, centre; Duff, right guard; Wilson, left guard; McCormick, right tackle; Bissell, left tackle; Coleman, right end; Bredemus, left end; Capt. Hart, Pendleton, Sparks, and Ballou, back field.

Billiard Victors at Doyle's.

In last night's game of the league preliminary three-cushion tournament at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Academy P. Miller defeated J. Manahan by a score of 40 to 31 in 76 innings. The high run of 5 was made by Miller. To-night at 7:30 o'clock John Dankelman will meet A. Latchford. In the Class B tournament L. Wilson defeated Dr. Howe by a score of 25 to 19. To-night A. Sherman will play M. Beck.

Beecher and Smith After Wolgast.

Both Willie Beecher and Young Sammy Smith, who will meet in a ten-round bout at the National Sporting Club Friday night, have an eye on Ad Wolgast's lightweight crown. They believe that they are rapidly getting into line as contenders for the title. Therefore both are exceedingly anxious to win Friday night's mill. They are training hard and will be in grand shape when they climb through the ropes. The boys are both clever, hard-hitting lightweights who can go at any pace and still look fresh.

FOOTBALL GAMES TO-DAY.

Princeton Meets Villanova and Yale Tackles Tufts College.

Some of the prominent college elevens will have a chance to try out the new rules against stiff opponents to-day. Princeton will meet Villanova in a game which will compel Princeton to go faster than in the contest last Saturday. Villanova played a hard game against Carlisle, being defeated by the Indians in a 6 to 0 game. Yale should have an easy time at New Haven against Tufts, while Pennsylvania will go against a fast and well-coached eleven in Franklin and Marshall. The Carlisle Indians will meet Dickinson at Carlisle.

This week will see the last of the mid-week games for many of the elevens, as every afternoon will be taken up with perfecting new plays for games which are to come later in the season. To-day's schedule is as follows:

Yale vs. Tufts, at New Haven.
Princeton vs. Villanova, at Princeton.
Penn vs. Franklin and Marshall, at Philadelphia.
Brown vs. Rhode Island State, at Providence.
Carlisle vs. Dickinson, at Carlisle.
Colgate vs. Alfred, at Hamilton.
Vermont vs. St. Lawrence, at Burlington.
Washington and Jefferson vs. Bethany, at Bethany.

N. Y. U. Prepares to Meet Princeton.

With only three more days of practice left before their opening game at Princeton next Saturday, the New York University football men are making strenuous efforts to fit themselves for the contest. Coach Olcott is carrying out the policy this year which brought such good results last year. He has arranged for N. Y. U. to meet the teams of several neighboring High Schools and colleges in practice games. Yesterday the High School of Commerce football team went up to Ohio Field and engaged in some rough scrimmage with the N. Y. U. squad. No scoring was permitted, but the collegians found little difficulty in rolling back the High School line. Yule, N. Y. U.'s crack full back, reeled off some of his long end runs and kicked remarkably well. He punted well over fifty yards. Gorsch's line bucking was particularly effective, as was that of Murphy, who took Yule's place at full back during the last half hour of practice. There is every possibility that Murphy will play in the Princeton game on Saturday. Crawford kept out of most of the scrimmage on account of a badly bruised hand. He will probably be working again to-morrow. Booth and Dutcher were drilled at ends and showed up well on the defense. Dutcher was especially clever in handling forward passes. It looks as though Dutcher and Crawford will be N. Y. U.'s two wings this year. Wheeler, who played left end last season, seems to be a fixture at tackle now, and Dutcher's only rival for the wing position is Eliffe, who was right half back last year. Olcott will probably keep Eliffe in the back field, however, as he will need a good string of backs on account of the heavy schedule.

Regulars Out of Practice at Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 4.—On account of absence of a number of first-string men, the Cornell 'Varsity football team was patched up in practice this afternoon, the substitutes getting plenty of opportunity. Robb, Bates, Smith, Champaign, and Austin were not on the field for work, and Butler did not report until late. Deland played left guard, O'Rourke right tackle in place of Austin, Smith quarter back for Butler, O'Connor and Nichols for Robb and Bates. Willson, Taylor, and Gass played in the scrub back field. Although Eyrich, the star end on the freshman team last Fall was on the field, it is not know yet whether the Faculty will let him play. The coaches were a scared when Pitcher did not report, and a rumor gained circulation that he had been put on probation by the Faculty of the College of Arts, into which college hehas recently transferred from the School of Civil Engineering. Inasmuch as he was in good standing in his former college it is hard to explain how he can be put on probation, and the coaches are sure that the matter will be straightened out. The coaches developed a couple of good kickers in Wellman and Whyte. Wellman started out for tackle, but has been shifted to full back. His drop kicking is almost as accurate as Pitcher's. Whyte is one of the "sub" half backs, and he is a strong kicker.

ATHLETIC NEWS AND NOTES.

The date for the Monument games, which were to have been held at Celtic Park on Oct. 16, has been shifted to one later in the month, the managers of the club having made a satisfactory trade with another organization. This will now permit of the appearance of all of the local stars, who on Oct. 15 will compete in New Orleans.

Win Bailey, the sterling little distance runner of the Mercury Foot, is putting in his best licks at Columbia Oval fitting himself for cross-country work and indoor events during the Fall and Winter. Bailey has taken on weight and accompanying strength, and promises to be a factor in the championship hill and dale contests.

The closeness with which the members of the new Registration Committee are watching competitive doings in their bailiwick is shown at each set of open games. Terence Farley, P. J. Walsh, and Ed Hart, the administrators of athletic justice, are always alert, and cause the laws to be lived up to to the letter.

Mohawk athletes will hold their twelfth annual ball next Saturday night at the Manhattan Casino. It is said that the stars of the track and field firmament will be in attendance.

Joe Hardmeyer of the Thirteenth Regiment announces that the athletic association of his organization is preparing for an active season in indoor athletics. With that purpose in view, an election will be held during the coming week to select a committee to do the work.

The recent great walking of Goulding of Toronto and Webb, formerly one of the speediest men in England, served to show that the world's amateur record of 6:29 3-5, held by "Cinders" Murray of New York, is in danger. Goulding won by several yards in the one-mile event in 6:32 2-5, and is said to have been capable of doing much better. A movement is on foot to have both men compete in New York at an early date.

VANDERBILT THROWS OUT BENZ ENTRIES

Excluded from Grand Prize Race for Criticising Last Saturday's Contest.

The three Benz entries nominated for the second running of the Grand Prize race over the Long Island Motor Parkway on Oct. 15 were dropped from the list of entries by the Motor Cups Holding Company last night. This radical action was taken after consideration of the letter which Jesse Froehlich, Managing Director of the Benz Auto Import Company, gave out Monday criticising the management of the Vanderbilt Cup race for failing to provide better protection for the drivers and mechanics by keeping the course clear.

The following letter was sent to Mr. Froehlich yesterday by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., President of the Motor Cups Holding Company, under whose auspices the Grand Prize race is being held:

New York, Oct. 4, 1910.

Mr. Jesse Foehlich, managing Director Benz Auto Import Company, 250 West Fifty-fourth Street, New York City.

Dear Sir: I inclose herewith a check of the Motor Cups Holding Company for $1,750, thus refunding to you the amount of your entry fees, the balance of which was paid to-day.

In view of the tone of the letter which was sent to our manager, Mr. Pardington, and simultaneously published in the papers, and the criticism you make on the management of the race, which we consider to be absolutely uncalled for and unwarranted, we do not think it wise that the cars under your management should compete. Yours truly,

W. K. VANDERBILT, Jr.

Mr. Froehlich's letter to Manager A. R. Pardington on Monday criticising the Vanderbilt race and threatening to withdraw the Benz cars unless adequate police protection was provided, caused plenty of comment among automobile men yesterday. Mr. Froehlich wanted the race to be run over the Savannah course, where the first Grand Prize race was held in 1908. In his letter he said: "Unless I am absolutely assured that the course will be properly guarded in a way that the races are guarded in Europe as well as the way the public has been protected at Savannah, Lowell, Philadelphia, and Elgin, I positively will not allow our cars to start."

The Benz Company had three cars entered for the race, and nominated Barney Oldfield, Victor Hemery, and Franz Heims to drive them.

Although much criticism has been made about crowding of the course to the peril of the drivers, Harry F. Grant, the driver of the winning Alco car in the Vanderbilt race, gave out a statement yesterday saying the course was policed better than during the race of 1909, when no one was injured. Grant's statement is as follows:

There has been a lot of explanation of how some drivers lost the race because of the crowd on the road. Those who never were in the race before and have no experience for comparison are particularly grieved. I want to say emphatically that the course was clearer this year than it was last, much clearer. All the race managers have to do to prove this is to look at the photographs that show the road this year where last year the same ground was covered with spectators. Last year I seemed to be driving straight into the crowd which parted as I came to it, but this year I had no trouble at all. I shut off the power in the turns every time and took them very slowly. I positively took no chances. I never do. Lee, my mechanician, is just as emphatic as I am in declaring that the road was clearer than last year, and I know of some others who were in the race, some good losers, who agree with me.

After a race is over I do not care about talking of it, win or lose, but I have been urged to do so now, and I want to add that I would have won by a bigger margin had it not been for a mistake in the signals, through which I was given to understand that I was in second position away back in the middle of the race when I was really sixth.

JACK JOHNSON TO RACE.

Barney Oldfield Accepts Negro Fighter's Challenge to Compete Here.

Barney Oldfield and Jack Johnson, the champion prizefighter, are to meet in an automobile race at the Sheepshead Bay track Oct. 20. The promoter has a signed contract and lease with the owners of the Coney Island race track, and also has Johnson's name on an agreement. William Pickens, manager for Oldfield, is in the city and said last night that Oldfield had agreed to the race and that he would sign the contract for the champion automobilist within the next twenty-four hours. Negotiations have been in progress between the promoters, track owners, Johnson, and Oldfield for two months, but there proved to be many obstacles to overcome.

Johnson has had for many months aspirations to prove himself a champion at the automobile race game, and has challenged Oldfield and other drivers repeatedly. Oldfield looked upon the proposition as an advertising scheme for the fighter until he was convinced of Johnson's sincerity. The two men will meet within the next few days and post a forfeit for their appearance.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 4.—Barney Oldfield, the automobile racer, to-night said that he did not care anything about racing Jack Johnson, but now that the match was made he was going in for it with all the energy he possesses. Oldfield is in Springfield, giving exhibitions at the Illinois State Fair. He will leave on Friday for New York, where he will begin training for the Johnson contest. When Oldfield was asked what style of machine he would use in the race with Johnson he said: "I am not particular. I want him to pick whatever class of racing car he desires."

FLANAGAN GOING TO IRELAND.

Famous Weight Thrower Will Sail for His Old Home Saturday.

John Flanagan, America's greatest weight thrower, threw a broadside into the ranks of the Irish-American Athletic Club yesterday when he announced his decision to sail for Ireland next Saturday. "Genial John" says that a relative died recently, leaving considerable property, and that he has the commission to manage the estate.

Flanagan's defection from competition in the Amateur Athletic Union championships, to be held a week from next Saturday in New Orleans, will probably cause a loss in the point column to the Winged Fist of at least ten points, as it was conceded on all sides that in his present form John seemed certain of first places in both the "hammer" and "fifty-six."

In all likelihood Flanagan, during his athletic career lasting over fourteen years, has won more championship titles, including American, Canadian, and Olympic, than any other man. Invariably consistent, the sturdy son of the "Ould Sod" could generally make a record or near-record performance at his favorite games.

SIMPLEX MAKES FAST TIME.

Drivers Tuning Up for 200-Mile Road Race at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—Mile-a-minute time was made in practice early today by some of the drivers of the big automobiles entered in the 200-mile road race in Fairmount Park next Saturday. The course is eight and a quarter miles long, and the best time this morning was made by W. C. Mullen in a Simplex, who covered the course in 8:20. The record for the course is 7:41. Beyond the loss of a wheel by one of the machines, there was no accident.

The drivers are permitted to practice from 6:30 to 7:30 each morning. During that hour the course is adequately policed and no one is allowed to cross the roads over which the machines run.

So far there are twenty-seven entries for the big race, and among the drivers are Grant and several others who competed in the Vanderbilt Cup race last Saturday on Long Island. The race is under the auspices of the Quaker City Automobile Club and the City of Philadelphia.

The contestants will be divided into three classes, the winner in each receiving a prize of $1,000 and an additional $2,500 will go to the car making the fastest time in the race. The proceeds from the sale of grand stand seats and other privileges will go to charitable institutions.

Boxing Show for Irish-Americans.

A professional boxing show will be held under the auspices of the Irish-American Athletic Club at the clubhouse, 110 West Fifty-ninth Street, on next Monday night. The Entertainment Committee engaged Joe Humphries as matchmaker, and this is the programme that Joe has submitted to the committee: Paddy Sullivan against "Battling" Jack Nelson, main bout of ten rounds; a semi-final of six rounds, and four four-round bouts. Charley White, "Old Eagle Eye," will be the referee.

Sharkey's Boxing Card To-night.

Although beaten by K. O. Brown, "Fighting" Joe Hyland will meet Danny Savage, the New Jersey lightweight, at the Sharkey Athletic Club to-night. They will box ten rounds in the main attraction of the programme. Hyland gave an unusual exhibition of gameness in his fight with Brown on Monday night, and after the "go" showed up in such good condition that he feels he will be able to give Savage the fight of his career. Savage is known as the champion lightweight of New Jersey and has beaten many of the best boys in his class. In the semi-final young Healy of Newark will meet Richy Ryan or some other good boy for six rounds. There will be four preliminary scraps. For the opening number Jim Galvin, the wrestler, will tackle Paul Cronje, who is known as the "Boer Wonder." Cronje is 6 feet 4 inches tall and contends he can throw any man in the world.

MOORE AND MORAN FIGHT TO A DRAW

Philadelphia Boy Severely Punished, but Comes Back Strong Toward the End.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 4.—By coming back strong in the three closing rounds Pal Moore, the Philadelphia boy, earned a draw in his twelve-round bout with Owen Moran of England before the Armory Athletic Association here to-night. In the ninth round Moran delivered a series of hard blows to the body which forced Moore to clinch repeatedly in order to avoid further punishment. Moore was apparently in a bad way, and the crowd looked for a quick ending, but the Philadelphia boy recovered in the next three rounds, and by giving Moran as much as he received won a draw decision, which was very popular with the crowd.

The first round, which was marked by two lively mix-ups, ended with honors even. In the second round Moore hit Moran a rather low blow, and the Briton complained that he had been fouled. Moran followed up with two vicious uppercuts, and landed a series of head and body blows on the Quaker, drawing first blood. It was Moran's round. At the beginning of the third round Moore was warned after delivering what seemed to be another low blow. Moore showed his real form for the first time in this round, and after landing two hard rights to the jaw forced the fighting and had the better of the exchanges. It was Moore's round.

Moore had a shade the best in the fourth round, which was marked by some lively mix-ups and some good blocking by both men. Moran had the advantage in the fifth, alternating head and body blows on Moore with much success. Moore came back again in the sixth round, and had a slight advantage of the exchanges, but was unable to keep up the work, and the seventh round saw Moran again setting the pace and handing out such a stiff array of jolts that the Philadelphian was staggering when the bell sounded. It was Moran's round. The Briton also shaded the Quaker in the eighth, jabbing Moore repeatedly on the jaw and occasionally sending in stiff body punches.

The ninth round showed Moore in evident distress, and it looked as if Moran would finish him, but the short rest at the close of the round proved a life-saver, and in the three succeeding rounds the Quaker showed up as strongly as his opponent in every department, and earned a draw.

GOLF NOTES OF INTEREST.

Provision is being made at the Nassau Country Club for a large field of starters in its invitation golf tournament, to be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week. The programme calls for five sixteens, and the contestants will classify themselves in a 36-hole medal play round all day Thursday. A gold medal will be given the low-score man in the stroke event. Among those who have already entered are Walter J. Travis and John M. Ward of Garden City.

The Oakland Golf Club sends word that it is proposed to hold a woman's tournament during the third week of this month. As the invitation affair at the Country Club of Brookline is on for Oct. 17 to 20, it is hardly likely that Oakland would care to conflict, especially as most of the prominent women golfers have arranged to compete over the Clyde Park links.

Herbert Strong, the Apawamis professional, recently laid out a private golf course on the estate of F. F. Proctor at Central Valley, N. Y. According to Strong, the country lends itself to the purpose, as the line of play crosses a corner of a lake going to one of the holes, and at another point skirts the border of the water. Some day there will probably be 18 holes, but 9 will suffice at present.

WOMEN ON TENNIS COURTS.

Miss Hammond Plays Brilliantly for Metropolitan Championship.

Fresh from her victory at Longwood, Miss Louise M. Hammond, holder of the Eastern States title and challenger for the women's National championship, gave a rare display of her powers in the women's Metropolitan championship, which began yesterday on the dirt courts of the West Side Tennis Club, 238th Street and Review Place. As an opponent in the first round she met Mrs. William H. Pouch, who as Miss Helen Holwig, won the National women's title in 1895. Miss Hammond was on edge and uncovered a brand of tennis the equal of which has never been seen in the East. Playing from deep court, she made placing shots and passes down the alleys which delighted the spectators. Only very rarely did she come to the net, but when she did it was to smother some short lob of the former champion. From the moment the first ace went whizzing over the net Miss Hammond was master of the situation, and finally accounted for the match at 6—2, 6—3.

The arrangements for the tournament are in the hands of Miss Elizabeth H. Moore, the former National champion. There are twenty-seven entries in the singles and eleven pairs in the doubles, and all are of a hight class. The summary:

Metropolitan Championship, Women's Singles.—First Round—Mrs. Frederick Schmitz defeated Miss Clara Kuttroff, 6—2, 6—2; Miss Dorothy Green defeated Miss K. Richardson by default; Miss. F. A. Gauther defeated Mrs. E. Lewis, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1; Mrs. J. V. Blanchard defeated Miss M. Rice, 6—4, 8—6; Miss Ira A. Kissell defeated Miss Florence Ballin, 6—3, 7—5; Miss Marie Wagner defeated Miss Blanche Brine, 6—2, 6—2; Miss E. C. Bunce defeated Miss May Ballin, 6—0, 6—1; Miss Louise M. Hammond defeated Mrs. W. H. Pouch, 6—2, 6—3; Miss Edna Wildey defeated Miss A. Cragin, 6—0, 6—1; Mrs. A. Humphries defeated Miss M. H. Barchdull by default; Miss Edith Handy defeated Mrs. George V. de Gersdorff, 6—2, 6—2.

Second Round—Miss Noyes defeated Miss E. Johnstone, 6—0, 6—3; Miss Edith Handy defeated Miss Pauline Donvan, 6—0, 6—0; Miss Edna Wildey defeated Mrs. A. Humphries, 6—0, 6—0; Miss A. Browning defeated Miss A. H. Oeder, 6—2, 6—3; Mrs. Frederick Schmitz versus Miss Dorothy Green, 6—4, 4—6, unfinished.

Leach Cross and Jack Dorman.

Leach Cross has been engaged to box before the members of the Fairmont Athletic Club next Tuesday night. The fighting dentist is matched to go ten rounds with Jack Dorman, who has won all of his recent battles against heavier men. When Cross gets through with Dorman he will be ready to take on Battling Hurley. Leach will start training to-morrow morning at Johnson's Road House with Joe Mandot as his sparring partner. Dorman will do his training at the Fairmont Athletic Club.

Wolgast May Not Fight Again.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champion, may never fight again. An examination of the champion's left arm, which was broken with his fight with McFarland at Fond du Lac last week, was made yesterday. The arm was broken just below the elbow, and the attending physician said Wolgast would not be able to fight again for four months, and possibly never be able to use the arm in hard fights again.

Peerless

SILENCE—COMFORT

50 H.-P. Touring Car

A Six-Cylinder Peerless car has certain advantages, not only for touring, but also for town and suburban use, because of its combination of power and flexibility. It is frequently desirable, and sometimes necessary, to have the power; and the flexibility which the car possesses is a constant comfort.

We are now prepared to demonstrate this type of car, and to accept a limited number of orders for October delivery.

You are invited to visit our salesroom.

POPE-HARTFORD CARS

In the Vanderbilt Cup Race

When the race was ended the two Pope-Hartford cars, which finished sixth and tenth, were still running as steadfastly and as well as when they jumped from the tape at the start. THEIR BONNETS WERE NOT ONCE RAISED DURING THE RACE. One defeated Hearne, in a Marmon, winner of the Indianapolis Speedway Helmet. Both defeated Livingstone, in a National, winner of the Illinois trophy; Louis and Arthur Chevrolet and Bobby Burman, all many time breakers of records, and many other famous cars and drivers. Both were at various times during the race ahead of the four men who led at the finish.

Jack Fleming (Sixth) made the distance of 278.08 miles in 4h. 26m. 47s., an average speed for the whole race of 62.75 miles an hour. Fastest lap (12th) 10m. 15s., a speed of 74.04 miles an hour. Time behind Grant, the winner, 10m. 49s. Time out for tire changes, 23m.

Bert Dingley (Tenth) made the distance of 278.08 miles in 4h. 37m. 59s., an average speed for the whole race of 60.10 miles an hour. Fastest lap (19th) 10m. 59s., a speed of 69.09 miles an hour. Time behind the winner, Grant, 21m. 55s. Time out for tire changes, 37m. 42s.

WERE STRICTLY STOCK MODELS

The Pope-Hartford 1911 model cars which finished in the greatest automobile race ever ridden in the history of the sport were in every respect STOCK cars, as required by the rules of the American Automobile Association, which sanctioned the race. They conformed in every particular to the catalogue descriptions of these models. We shall have on our show room floor for sale in a few days their exact duplicates.

We entered these cars primarily to demonstrate their steadfast durability and staunchness under severe strain, and only incidentally their speed. Cars without this "stand up quality" would never have finished the race. Indeed, fourteen cars withdrew before the finish. It was, without doubt, the most gruelling test of a machine's real worth to which a car has ever been put. You could devise no more convincing test of a car's quality.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 5, 1910.

THE ISSUE IS ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Stimson wanders in darkness and error. In his speech accepting the Republican nomination for Governor he says that "the coming campaign is a State campaign, to be decided upon State issues." If that is his belief he will be promptly undeceived. The dominating issue, the issue that will decide the contest, is the ambition of Theodore Roosevelt to get back into the White House.

That issue is in the minds of the voters who will decide the election, and no State issue, however important, can crowd it out of their minds. The bulk of the voters in both parties will, we suppose, unquestioningly vote their party ticket as usual. That is their habit. But in Mr. Stimson's party there is a very great number of voters who would be entirely content to let Mr. Dix be charged with the administration of State affairs if by electing him Governor they could thwart Mr. Roosevelt's ambition to charge himself once more with the administration of National affairs. That feeling among Republicans is going to cost Mr. Stimson many votes, more votes than he or Mr. Roosevelt have any idea of. Mr. Roosevelt is the issue men are thinking about and talking about. Who hears anything said about State issues?

Mr. Roosevelt has made himself an issue. Even while he was hunting lions in Africa an active propaganda in his behalf was carried on by his friends in this country. Almost from the moment of his return he plunged into politics with a fervor, we might almost say with a ferocity, which left no doubt of his aims and purposes. His speechmaking tour in the West opened the campaign of 1912 for the Republican nomination. He elbowed Vice President Sherman aside and descended on the State Convention like a whirlwind, because he felt that it was necessary for him to control the Republican organization in this State. Even if Mr. Stimson should be defeated Mr. Roosevelt will be in a position to make a good fight for the New York delegation to the National Convention.

Mr. Stimson's very speech of acceptance shows that he is afraid of the Roosevelt issue. Why does he omit all mention of the ex-President? Why does he laboriously put State issues to the fore, and speak consoling words about the entire compatibility of business prosperity with moderately progressive policies? Why does he deprecate centralization? "A progressive and efficient State Government," he says, "is the surest safeguard against undue extension of Federal power." This is almost treasonable in its anti-Rooseveltianism. With a candidate talking in this fashion and the maker of the candidate and of the platform shouting for a large increase of the Federal power, the Republican Party presents the curious spectacle of a body in motion at full speed, but one end moving forward and the other backward. Does Mr. Stimson disbelieve in the Roosevelt policies? Is he himself disturbed by the violence of Mr. Roosevelt's language about the courts and by his insistence that our institutions must be remodeled?

Mr. Stimson has undergone a slight change of mind in respect to direct primaries. He has been quoted as expressing grave doubts concerning the efficacy of that nostrum. In his speech of acceptance he offers some expository statements about direct nominations, points to the platform on which he stands, and finally promises to use "the Constitutional powers" of his office if elected to put this particular reform into effect. But on the very day when he made this promise the State Committee, on Mr. Griscom's motion, elected as its Chairman Deputy Attorney General Ezra P. Prentice, who is a determined opponent of direct primaries. Mr. Barnes gladly seconded the motion to make Mr. Prentice Chairman, saying that he had "particular pleasure" in doing so because of Mr. Prentice's "known opposition to direct nominations." These things have a queer look. The candidate ostentatiously omits from his speech all mention of the greatest Republican of the State, the Republican who fills the whole stage, dodges that Republican's "policies" or seeks to temper and modify them, and, although he promises primary reform, the organization puts in its chief place of power an active foe of that reform. Is it possible that the Republican managers have decided that it is best to keep Theodore Roosevelt and Charles E. Hughes out of the campaign?

If that is their purpose, they will fail. Mr. Roosevelt is in the campaign, and in to stay. He will remain in until Election Day. Every man who has any stake in the orderly administration of the Government, in the maintenance of the integrity of the courts, every man who has respect for the country's laws and its institutions, and who is moved to disquiet and alarm by Mr. Roosevelt's appeals to mob passion and unreason, understands very well that this is the year to check and thwart his designs, not next year or the year after. Beaten in his own State, Mr. Roosevelt will be a diminished figure in our National politics henceforth. He will be shorn of a great part of his dangerous power. If he is permitted to triumph in New York this Fall, for the election of Mr. Stimson would be Mr. Roosevelt's triumph, it will be practically impossible to prevent his seizing the nomination to the Presidency in 1912. Republicans who distrust and fear him understand that perfectly. That is the reason why so many of them are going to vote for Mr. Dix.

CONSECRATING THE CATHEDRAL.

The burden of debt having been lifted from St. Patrick's Cathedral, the splendid church, the largest in the Western World excepting the Cathedrals of the Cities of Mexico and Puebla, is ready for consecration. For many years St. Patrick's has been the centre of Catholic activity in this community and the pride of Catholics throughout the country. Its cornerstone was laid more than half a century ago by the greatly beloved Archbishop Hughes, and its construction was carried forward by his successors, Cardinal McCloskey and Archbishop Corrigan. Upon Archbishop Farley has fallen the task and the honor of freeing the Cathedral from debt. Within a very short time he has been able to pay $850,000, and to-day he will perform the rare and beautiful service of consecration in the presence of a great multitude of his fellow-communicants and Catholic prelates of high rank from Rome, Ireland, South Africa, and the Dominion of Canada, and many dioceses of the United States.

The event is of interest to every New Yorker, quite apart from his religious convictions. The Roman Catholic Church in this country is a vital and potent force for good. The history of the Cathedral forms an important and edifying chapter in the history of the growth and development of this metropolis. The long-delayed consecration of their principal edifice will encourage and freshly inspire the Catholics of the community, and good churchmen are useful citizens. The continued and growing influence of the Church in an era of widespread materialism is a cause for common congratulation.

St. Patrick's is one of the genuine architectural ornaments of this city. It is less ornate and elaborate, without and within, than some of the great churches of Latin countries, but its proportions are ample and harmonious and it bears the true aspect of ecclesiastical dignity.

WOODROW WILSON.

Dr. Wilson is puzzling the opposition politicians in several different ways. For one thing they cannot easily understand his humor. They undertook to fight a solemn college President, soaked in book learning, and they find themselves dealing with a man who sees, and makes others see, the comical side of greed and false pretenses, who "has fun" with his antagonists, and imparts it to his audiences. They had no idea that the patient researches of a historian and the discipline of managing a big university might give a strong mind a view of public affairs in which the mere politicians appear at once petty and amusing. Still less could they perceive that such a training might give a man insight into the real motives and thoughts of all sorts of people as to public affairs that would make the shrewdness of the selfish politicians a little ludicrous. And they are still more surprised by the doctor's amazing fairness and courtesy to the opposing party, forgetting that here is a cultured gentleman seeking an opportunity to serve the whole people and having the sense to see that he can get that opportunity only by the aid of votes from the opposing party. Of course Dr. Wilson is compelled by higher motives to fairness and courtesy in his public addresses, but these are still more incomprehensible to the ordinary campaigner.

Now a man who is good-natured and amusing has from the outset an excellent chance to catch the attention of audiences and of the public generally. Dr. Wilson has also the ability to retain and repay attention. He has clear and definite opinions on matters of immediate importance and interest, and he knows how to put them plainly and effectively. He is a partisan, and makes no secret of it. He is devoted to Democratic principles and he has the advantage over the usual Democratic partisan that he knows what those principles are. One of them, and the chief, is the greatest possible liberty for every man consistent with the rights of others. Few will deny this as a general statement. Dr. Wilson does not confine himself to the general statement. He has distinct notions bearing on the questions of the day, on the tariff, for instance, and on the use of corporate privileges. He regards the tariff as a policy originally intended to foster home industries until they could stand of their own strength, and though he may not think the policy well advised at any time, he sees that now the evil and mischief of the tariff are that it has built up a partnership between a powerful party and a great body of privileged individuals, that this partnership tends to increase and extend and fortify privilege and to deprive common people of their rights and opportunities. He seeks to dissolve the partnership, to replace the party that is bound by it by a party that is relatively free and unhampered. And he is making Republicans as well as Democrats see that this is a sound and necessary thing to do.

Again, he perceives that the corporation has, especially within the field of protected interests, become an instrument of oppression. He does not propose to wreck it or dissolve it or so bind it that it may not serve its proper ends. He proposes to hold it to responsibility by sensible laws defining the scope and use of its privileges and punishing the officers of the corporation who violate these laws. He is a lawyer by profession—though not by trade—and recently he went before the American Bar Association and explained his views along these lines, and lawyers of experience and wide knowledge found his views practical and enlightened. All this is a good deal of a novelty in recent American politics. It has been said that Dr. Wilson is or aims to be the Gov. Hughes of New Jersey, and there is a certain analogy between the men. But judging him by his public utterances, Dr. Wilson has the broader vision and the more efficient habit of mind. For example, he is not led off by the extravagant expectations Mr. Hughes entertains as to direct nominations. He elects to go to the root of our political difficulties and fix responsibility through a short ballot rather than still further to scatter it. His analysis of this matter a few months ago in The North American Review was a masterly piece of lucid exposition and acute political insight.

There is not much risk in saying that Dr. Wilson has the makings of a statesman. He certainly has the statesman's point of view and breadth of sympathy and comprehension. He is an extremely good specimen of a leader in these times when a cool head, a trained intellect, and sound moral sense are particularly needed. He is making an admirable canvass, and he appears to be winning respect and confidence among all sorts of people.

JUDGE EDWARD B. WHITNEY.

The Democrats of this city would do well to nominate Judge Edward B. Whitney as Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed himself in the only vacancy occurring this year. He was appointed by Gov. Hughes at the time of the resignation of Judge Gildersleeve, and he has made an excellent Judge. He is a lawyer not only of eminence but of rare public spirit. As Assistant Attorney General under President Cleveland, he argued some of the most important cases before the Supreme Court. He has without compensation served laboriously as counsel for numerous citizens' organizations in such matters as free transfers on the railroads of the city, the famous grab bills, and the Remsen gas bill, besides his voluntary service as counsel to the Tenement House Commission.

We know of no man in his profession who has used such unusual talents so generously for the public interest, and, since besides his undoubted fitness for the office and his experience in it, he has for years been a Democrat in principle, the party cannot wisely give him up.

THE DELAY AT QUEENSTOWN.

The fight for the preservation of Queenstown, Ireland, as a port of call for the fast mail steamers between New York and English ports, has crossed the Atlantic and reached Washington. The Cunarders are unnecessarily delayed by the stop at Queenstown. The demand nowadays is for quick travel. Mails can be distributed as quickly, all over the United Kingdom, from Fishguard, in Wales, as from Queenstown. The Queenstown stop, often made tedious by the prevalence of fogs off the south coast of Ireland, is a relic of older and slower days. The British post office is well enough equipped now with facilities for the distribution of mails to justify the abolition of the Queenstown stop, so far as the faster vessels are concerned.

Queenstown will not cease to be a port. But Queenstown is very jealous of its old repute. An Irish deputation on Monday put the matter before Postmaster General Hitchcock, at Washington, chiefly as an expression of Irish pride in Queenstown as a port of call for the great liners. The Postmaster General treated the deputation with courtesy, of course. But it is a part of his business to expedite mails, and the transatlantic mail service can best be expedited by dropping the Queenstown stop.

BROOKLYN'S SOCIALISTS.

What is it that makes the Socialists of the borough of churches and homes so bloodthirsty? In their local parade for the purpose of indorsing their candidate for Governor they wore red caps, and carried red flags, and displayed banners with maxims adapted if not designed to promote bloodthirsty sentiments, such as:

> "Capitalists and laborers are born enemies."
> "Capitalists are robbers."
> "Vote for your own class."
> "Strike together, vote together."

Why should anybody in the United States be anybody's "enemy," except for personal reasons outside of the pale of politics? If all capitalists are robbers it would be interesting to know how many in the parade own their own homes, or have money in the savings bank? And if a capitalist class is objectionable in a country whose boast is that it knows no classes among its electorate, is not any other class equally objectionable? Would not the country which includes all classes be just as badly off if capital plundered labor, or if labor plundered capital, or if any class whatever enjoyed any privileges except those conferred by the natural inequality of talents which no laws can equalize?

They are no patriots who vote for their class, and in public questions are guided by the selfish interests which are fitter to control private actions. Not all of the ideas of these agitated persons, who urge social reforms in the most unsocial manner, are bad. Their matter is better than their manner, and betterment of their manners would improve the prospects of the matters which they have so much at heart, and are not alone in such aspirations of better times for all.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Forgave, But Did Not Forget.

Inquiries as to the real nature of forgiveness—that is, as to what a person means when he says he forgives another—are suggested by the codicil which Julius L. Brown, a brother of the Governor of Georgia, added to his will half an hour before he died.

In its original form the will contained a bitter denunciation of the testator's sisters and other brothers, the result of a family quarrel over the division of the paternal estate by Julius Brown and the Governor, acting as executors, and no share of his large fortune was left to the members of the antagonistic faction. When Julius Brown knew that death was near, however, the situation troubled him, and he dictated and executed a codicil in which, after rehearsing the wrongs suffered by him, as he thought, at the hands of these near relatives, he declared: "I hereby forgive them all the damages and injury which they did me, and I hereby withdraw any and all unkind expressions which I have used in my will concerning them." But then came the significant sentence, "I still, however, exclude them from sharing in my estate."

Now, it is perfectly evident that there remained in the dying man's mind a clear memory of "damages and injury," and that his opinion of people who would do such things was not changed in the slightest degree. Moreover, he did not revoke the punitive clause in his will, which is what, perhaps, would have counted most. He simply said that he forgave them, and from that acquired for himself—what? It seems to have been a particularly empty formula, for had he really forgiven he would have torn up the old will and made a new one, providing for an equal distribution of his property among those with a natural claim to it and making no mention at all of the old quarrel. One can see how there would be in that consolation and reassurance for a dying man, while what Brown did might no less easily be interpreted as a savage revenge than as a magnanimous pardon. Certainly it was not a form of forgiveness that would be sought or accepted by anybody with much enthusiasm.

The forgiving that does not forget and does punish is hardly worth while, and possibly no quarrels are "made up" to the extent of restoring exactly the former status and relations except when both parties to them are moved to confess at least half of the responsibility for the trouble.

John S. Huyler.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos to the death of John S. Huyler, I would like to tell of a few of the manifold kindnesses and thoughtfulness of this great and good man to his employes.

He was never too busy to have a cheerful "Good morning" and a kind and encouraging word for the humblest of his people. He extended this thoughtfulness even to the sending of his saleswomen to the best chiropodists to ease and treat their aching feet at his own expense. It was his custom to give his girls at the beginning of the Summer two or three shirtwaists, (which means a lot to a working girl,) two weeks' vacation with pay every year, a turkey at Thanksgiving time, and at Christmas a week's salary and a two-pound box of candy.

He offered to all membership in the Young Women's Christian Association and the privilege of taking up music or any other course they desired, free of charge or expense to them.

These are only a few of the deeds of this godlike man, and there are no more sincere mourners to-day than his old employes.

A Lesson of the Disaster.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There ought not to be anything such as a regulation towline in the navy. The length of the towline should be adjusted to the strength of the current, the direction and force of the wind, and the trim of the boat.

The barge of the battleship New Hampshire, judging from the report of the accident in this morning's New York Times, was too much trimmed by the head, the towline was too long for the existing conditions of wind and tide, and the boat being improperly trimmed made it almost impossible to steer in safety.

The men of our navy are by far the best gunners in the world, but they evidently know little of handling small craft in a seaway or in strong currents.

At least, the crews ought to be trained how to trim a boat when overcrowded with men, more particularly when in tow athwart swift currents or strong winds.

U. S. NAVY VETERAN, 1861-65.

Richmond Hill, L. I., Oct. 3, 1910.

Which Will Succeed?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Given two young men as proposed by "Bridlington," the one lacking ability to handle the minutest details will be the most successful, I think. The reason, from my experience, is that the one who can handle the minutest details will spend all of his time fussing with details which the other fellow will have some good man to handle, enabling himself to look after more important matters. Too much detail is worse than too little in many cases.

The Increase in Traffic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a pamphlet on "Subways in New York," recently issued by the Public Service Commission, on Page 17 there occurs the following most remarkable statement:

> It is a fact that on the average in each twenty-four-hour period there are 160,000 more fares paid on the railroads and street railroads [of the City of New York] than there were during the previous twenty-four hours.

Multiplied by 365, this gives an annual daily increase of 58,400,000. As the present number carried per day is about 4,000,000, this would mean an increase of over 1,400 per cent. in one year!

The Trouble with Ballinger.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article on Federal conservation is the first clear ray of light thrown on that "tempest in a tea pot" which has been raging. Why, in the name of sense, is it kept up?

The trouble with Ballinger is that he stands for the speculator, and not the bona-fide settler; otherwise, he is right.

JOHN ADDAMS.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 30, 1910.

MORGAN AT CONVENTION.

Banker a Delegate to the Triennial Church Congress in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 4.—J. P. Morgan and his party from New York and many delegates and visitors are here for the opening to-morrow of the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. The conference will continue for twenty-three days, in which many subjects of interest to the Church will be considered.

One hundred Bishops and 582 lay and clerical delegates will take part in the deliberations. Delegates to the Woman's Auxiliary and wives of Bishops and delegates will bring the total attendance to more than 1,000.

Mr. Morgan, who arrived to-day, is a delegate, and will remain here until the close. In his party are Bishops Doane of Albany, Greer of New York, and Lawrence of Boston.

The Dignity of Cooking.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is a rare pleasure for the writer to see in your columns an editorial article about cooking, and the statement that it should not be left to servants.

Of all the good things that come by way of The Times on the editorial page, this is the best, because of the most vital use to humanity.

Modern conditions robbed the writer of that grand respect and love for the home and the work of the home that is the solid foundation of our nationality, and he was forced for many years to cook for himself and to be housekeeper, man and woman, and the breadwinner, so when he was left alone there was no difficulty about a servant—every single thing in the home could be done by him, and only the wash was done by outsiders until a servant was secured.

Each servant went away a better cook and a better lover of the home after those who should have taken an interest in it deserted.

A woman who cannot cook is like a sculptor who cannot model—who hires his work done by assistants and expects to keep his reputation. No woman can expect to keep a noble reputation unless she can cook and is a good homekeeper; it is her work in the home that decides whether she is a good or a bad woman—not her morals or her social standing. If she has morals and is in society and cannot cook or keep the home beautiful and tidy she is not a woman—she is something like a fraud, and the worst kind of a fraud at that.

Among the many arts of man there is not one so nobly useful and so interesting as cooking, even to the washing of dishes in an intelligent way.

The writer, while working on the statue of Lincoln, was alone much of the time, and he would leave the studio at exactly 12, cook and eat his dinner, and wash the dishes, all in one hour, and be back in the studio at work with a good pipe at 1 P. M.

In the evening he set the bread, and had fine results the next day.

All this simple dignity of labor went into the statue to enrich its feeling and to lend a certain power that one can get in no other way.

The society thing is a weak specimen of humanity needing just this labor of the hands and the mind to develop the true lady or the true gentleman. Write some more along this line—it is good, honest literary work.

The Price of Meat for Ten Years.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A current weekly claiming more than 1,000,000 circulation has in its issue of Oct. 1 a pro-tariff article so misleading in some of its alleged facts as to make it more amusing than instructive. In his argument for the maintenance of the wool tax the author states:

> That the presence here of this great supply of flesh food [sheep] tends to keep down the prices of other flesh food—beef, pork, poultry, &c.—will not be questioned. * * * In fact, all of the wool tax has been offset completely by the decrease in the price of flesh food.

Shades of Swift, Armour, and the rest of the big four! Where has this author been for the last ten years? Surely he has not been "keeping house" or else he must be a vegetarian, who does not have to patronize the butcher.

For his benefit let me quote a few figures to show a confiding public how the prices have decreased (?) in ten years:

	1900.	1910.	Av'ge Weight of Carcass.	Increase per Carcass.
Beef	.08½	.12½	700	$28.00
Veal	.09	.16	70	4.90

Pork, formerly the poor man's meat, has risen over 80 per cent., while loins of pork which sold at 10½ cents per pound are now selling at 21 cents a pound.

Surely this tariff champion is traveling on thin ice when he attempts to tell the American public that the prices of meats have decreased in ten years.

The Automobile and the Horse.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Constant Reader" is right in his opinion of the so-called test of the relative costs of running an automobile and a horse and buggy. This "test" omits so many elements of cost that it is misleading and a subject of jest among automobilists who know. The man who invests in a machine on the strength of it will be sadly disappointed.

Here are four items not included. They are as much a part of the cost of running a machine as the item of gasoline:

1. Interest on amount invested: Horse and buggy, $275, at 5 per cent., $13.75; automobile, $900, at 5 per cent., $45.

2. Depreciation: At the low figure of 20 per cent. on costs the depreciation on the automobile would be $180 per year. Assuming the car to be run 5,000 miles per year, this item alone amounts to 3½ cents per mile traveled.

3. State license: For the auto, $5 per year; for the horse and buggy nothing.

Insurance: For the automobile, $12 or $15 per year; for the horse and buggy, $5 or $6 per year.

A comparative test, based on all elements of cost, would be valuable and instructive, but an incomplete test is worse than useless.

MOTORIST.

Col. Roosevelt and The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article "The Colonel Makes Merry," in Sunday's issue of The Times, is certainly a clever bit of work, and one which will be remembered as cruelly turning it on the Colonel. Unfortunately for him, he tried, with more impulsiveness than good judgment, to make capital for his cause out of the news columns of The Times instead of profiting through the wisdom of its editorial articles, and in consequence he bumped up against the proverbial buzz saw in a manner that must have caused him no little chagrin. A snapshot of his facial expression when he read the article would be a comical addition to and more valuable than the collection of the thousand-and-one photos of himself that he so delights in and which the public is as weary of as it is of the man himself.

MAETERLINCK'S BLUE BIRD.

O Blue Bird, O blithe bird,
Where is thy place of nesting?
I hear thy song, the way along,
But vain has been my questing.

O Blue Bird, O blithe bird,
Why seek thy place of nesting?
To hear thy song would but e'er long
Thy nearness be attesting.

O Blue Bird, O blithe bird,
I near thy place of nesting;
For when I sing thy song I bring
An end to heart's unresting.

O Blue Bird, O blithe bird,
My heart's thy place of nesting;
For in heart's rest is found thy nest—
And not in vain, Life's questing.

History of Bergen Village.

Written by Daniel Van Winkle for the guidance of pupils of the public, parochial, and private schools of Jersey City in the competition for The New York Times Prizes for the best essay upon the founding and history of Bergen Village.

THIRD ARTICLE.

In 1643 the fierce roaming tribes along the upper Hudson, came down upon the Indians on the west side of the river, and captured some, while others fled to the fort at Manhattan for protection; others encamped at Communipaw back of Mill Creek Point, north of the present Central Railroad station, on the farm of Jan Evertsen Bout. Gov. Kieft heard of this encampment and thought it a good chance to punish the Indians for their obstinacy.

Accordingly he sent over from the fort eighty soldiers in boats, under the command of Sergeant Rudolph, with orders to destroy them. On the night of the 22d of February, 1643, this cruel order was obeyed all too literally, for even the women and children were not spared. A few escaped and being deceived by the darkness of the night, thought the attack had been made by their old enemies, and went to the fort for protection.

They soon discovered their mistake and then a relentless war began. All the Indian tribes made common cause against the white man, and so general was the uprising, and so fierce the attack, that in a short time all the settlers were driven away, and the savages again roamed unmolested over the soil of Pavonia.

Nothing remained but smoking ruins to mark the places where their homes had stood.

For nearly two years the whole territory was abandoned, when finally, in 1645, a treaty of peace was agreed upon between the Indians, and the Council at New Amsterdam. Remembering their sufferings, the colonists were slow in coming back to their former homes. Among those who were willing to risk the dangers and settle at Pavonia were Michael Jansen, the progenitor of the Vreelands and Jacob Walingen, the first of the Van Winkle family to land, upon our shores, Jan Evertsen Bout, and others.

Gradually they brought their boueries back to their former condition, but Gov. Kieft's exactions and injustice, and the memory of the cruel massacre of the Indians, against their remonstrances, caused them to send a protest to the States General, setting forth their grievances and asking his recall.

He was succeeded by Peter Stuyvesant July 28, 1646, who arrived at New Amsterdam May 11 the next year, and at once began his attempts to settle the existing troubles. He called together his Council of "Nine Men," among whom were Michael Jansen and Jan Evertsen Bout of Pavonia. After due deliberation they settled on a wise and conciliatory policy, that recognized alike the rights of the Indian, as well as of the white man. And now for ten years the colony progressed in peace. The farms were cultivated, and the people settled down to the hard routine of the pioneer. We do not know just how many people lived at that time—1652—in what is now Hudson County, but as there were only 600 living on Manhattan Island, the number here must have been correspondingly small.

Now and again, trouble broke out between the Indians and settlers, but was occasional and brief, until in the Fall of 1655 an Indian girl was shot, while stealing peaches on Manhattan Island. The news soon spread, and again the savages decked in war paint and feathers, combined to wreak vengeance upon their white neighbors. A terrible war now followed, and all who could escape, fled again to Manhattan for refuge, and "not one white person was left in Pavonia." All the boueries were destroyed, and the labor of years gone for naught. Can we realize the dangers and hardships our forefathers were compelled to endure before they could establish a home in safety?

Gov. Stuyvesant called a council of the Indian chiefs, and entered into negotiations with them for the full settlement of the difficulties. After long and tedious bartering, a price was agreed upon as the ransom for the white captives, which was paid, the pipe of peace was smoked, and the second general Indian war ended. The colonists slowly returned to their ruined homes, and bent their energies to clearing away the ruin that had been wrought. The Director General, realizing the difficulty of protecting scattered or isolated settlers, issued Jan. 18, 1656, an ordinance warning them against the danger, and ordered them to gather together in towns, villages, or hamlets, so that they might be defended the more easily. At the same time he ordained, that no more chimneys should be built of wood, or roofs covered with reeds. But this order seemed of no avail, for it was repealed the next year.

In order to remove any cause for trouble with the Indians, because of adverse claims of land, Gov. Stuyvesant and the Council at New Netherland purchased of them Jan. 30, 1658, a tract of land "lying on the west bank of the Hudson, beginning at the Great Clip (meaning rock) above Weehawken, and from thence right through the lands, till above the Island of Siskakes, (Secaucus,) and thereupon thence to the Kill van Kull, and so along to the Constable Hook, and from the Constable Hook again to the aforesaid clip at Weehawken, with all the lands, islands, &c., for 80 fathom of wampum, 20 fathom of cloth, 12 brass kettles, and one-half barrel of strong beer."

By this deed the Indians gave up all ownership to the territory between the Hudson, and the Hackensack and Newark Bay, (comprising the old township of Bergen.) This purchase and the just treatment of Stuyvesant settled all hostile feeling against the whites, who were anxious to return to their former homes. The order to concentrate in villages was still in force, and March 1, 1660, Tielman Van Vleck and others petitioned for the right to settle "on the maize land behind Communipaw," but were refused.

On the 17th of August following several of the inhabitants joined together and petitioned, for the right to cultivate farms and plantations on the west side of the river behind Communipaw. This was granted, provided "that such village shall be founded and placed on a convenient spot, that may be defended with ease, and to be selected by the Director General and Council; that all who applied would share with others by lot; should send at least one person capable of bearing arms for general service, and should make a beginning to erect buildings six weeks after the drawing of lots."

And now the little village of Bergen—the place of the hills—began to take shape and form. The Dutch settlers, spurred on by the new dignity that had been granted them, bustled about and gathered the logs, that were to form the stockade to surround the new village. Jacques Cortelyou, the first surveyor of New Amsterdam, marked out the plan, which has been preserved to the present day at Bergen Square. He first laid out a plot 800 feet square, which is now bounded by Tuers Avenue, Newkirk, Van Reypen, and Vroom Streets; then divided this plot into four quarters by cross-streets—the present Bergen Avenue and Academy Street. At the place of their intersection an open space, 160 feet wide and 225 feet long, was left, where the cattle might gather when driven in from the outside fields. Bergen Square.

Then the people took the logs they had gathered, and, sharpening the ends, placed them upright in the ground, thus forming a close, compact, barricade along the outer side of the plot, that could not be surmounted. At the ends of the cross-streets—Bergen Avenue and Academy Street—strong gates were built that when closed would make a complete and continuous defense against the attacks of the Indians.

At once the sturdy settlers began the building of their homes, and the square must have presented a busy scene in those days. As may be imagined it was a year of hard work. While building their homes, their farm lands, which were located outside the palisades, were to be cleared, so as to be ready for cultivation the following Spring, and at the same time they must be on the alert against marauding Indians. Theirs was not an easy lot, but with true Dutch energy and perseverance they overcame all difficulties.

As stated before, in order to fully realize their actual condition, we must put ourselves in their places and imagine their surroundings. All about them giant forest trees with interwoven branches covered the territory, and from within the line blazed by the surveyor's axe, these trees were being cut down, their branches trimmed and cast aside to be burned at some future time. The sound of the saw mingled with the "gee-haw" of the Dutch drivers, as they guided their ox teams hither and thither, drawing off the logs and clearing up the space assigned for their homes, and before the Wintry blasts came down from the North the rude but comfortable homes were grouped within the enclosure.

On the northeast corner of the square a lot had been set apart for the schoolhouse, but so busy were the people with their home building and the clearing of the ground round about the palisades, that the school could not be built until later. How eagerly must the tired burgher have welcomed the dawning of the first Sabbath. The beliefs and traditions of their far away home in Holland, had followed them to the new country, and although there was no sound of church-going bells calling them to their devotions, they needed no ornate temple in which to gather for worship; but under the leafy boughs tinted with the Autumn hues, they solemnly dedicated themselves and their new homes to the service of the God of their fathers. Thus in the very infancy of our State, the Church was founded in the village of Bergen, that has not only continued to the present time, but from which has spread the religious life of our city and county.

Nor were the needs of the children forgotten, for one of the demands of their religious belief, was the instruction of the young, so that they might for themselves read the precious truths from the Bible they so much prized. Although the little company did not secure a regularly licensed school-master, until two years later; as was the custom, some member of the congregation took his place on the Sabbath day, or in the evening twilight the little group might be seen gathered about the teacher, who, seated upon the trunk of some fallen tree, or perhaps on the doorstep of the new home, laboriously taught the mysteries of the Dutch alphabet, and traced out on the sacred page the "old, old story."

It will be remembered that the permission to settle, included the obligation to gather in villages. This meant that their houses must be placed within the defenses, while their farms were located in the territory outside. These were called "Buyten tuyn," or outside gardens. Sometimes petty disputes arose, for the settlement of which, they were obliged to turn to the court of the Burgomasters and schepens at New Amsterdam.

They felt that these neighborhood differences could be settled at home, so a petition was presented to the Governor and Council at New Amsterdam asking for relief, and for the establishment of a local court that should have power to settle these differences. This petition was granted, and Sept. 5, 1661, an ordinance was passed by the Director and Council, granting to the inhabitants of Bergen "an Inferior Court of Justice," with the privilege "of appeal to the Director General and Council of New Netherland, to be by their Honors finally disposed of; * * * this court to consist of one Schout, who shall convoke the appointed schepens and preside at the meetings, &c., commencing on the 20th of this month." Elected by the Director and Council as schepens:

Michael Jansen,
Harmon Smeeman,
Caspar Stynmets.

This court was authorized "to enact some ordinances respecting surveys, highways, outlets, fences of land, &c., building of churches and schools, * * * but to submit their opinions in writing to the Director General and Council."

Tielman Van Vleck was made Schout. Under this simple government the people prospered. Sometimes differences arose with the people of Communipaw, in regard to cattle straying and fence lines, but these were no more serious than often occur in any community, when the selfishness of human nature asserts itself for the sake of personal advantage.

Communipaw was probably one of the most inviting places on the Hudson. Located in a sheltered cove, and protected by a narrow strip of land with the hills beyond, it was chosen by many for their home. The near-by waters were stocked with fish of many kinds, and the harbor bed yielded up an abundance of delicious shell fish, while the farm lands gave up abundant crops in return for the labor of the settler. In the earlier times it was the resort of the Indian tribes to secure their Winter's supply of fish, or gather in the wild fowl that frequented its waters.

It is a curious fact that although the orders of the Council at New Netherland to concentrate in fortified towns applied with equal force to Communipaw, the order was never complied with, and it always remained a little scattering village.

In "The Concert," seen for the first time last night at the Belasco Theatre, there is the double satisfaction of an exceptionally clever comedy, and a little masterpiece of comedy acting the equal of which one would have to go far to find. Leo Ditrichstein has made the adaptation of Herr Hermann Bahr's piece, and he has made it very well indeed. Moreover, it is Mr. Ditrichstein who acts the rôle of the temperamental child—the great composer—who must find change and color where he can in painting, in sculpture, in the smiles of pretty women, if need be. And if there had ever been any doubt in our minds that Mr. Ditrichstein is really a great actor his playing of this rôle would entirely dispel it.

The fact is that the actor has been too long wasted on the absurdities of farce—of his own and other people's devising. For no actor on our stage for a long time has composed and delivered with a surer sense of all its values a rôle embodying a considerable varied assortment of human values. In its lighter comedy way, Mr. Ditrichstein's Gabor Arany deserves to rank with Mr. Warfield's Anton Barwig in "The Music Master." It is the sort of acted portrait to tuck away in memory alongside of Mr. Mansfield's Prince Karl. It is, in short, the sort of achievement which comes along only once in so often to show how piffling and unimportant much of that which passes for acting on the stage is.

So much for the principal performer in this comedy, the success of which abroad promises to be easily duplicated here, and deserves to be. For Mr. Bahr has taken the measure of a genius as one who has lived and known him, and he has delivered him over for inspection, with all his infirmities on his head. Also, he has known how to make him appear the child that he is, so that, if condemning, you may pity. Which, after all, is to say that genius carries its penalties as well as its rewards.

In this case the brilliant pianist Arany is beset by admiring women. They make love to him, they load him down with flowers, they sigh for a word from him, in short they adore him. And—this is important—they pay him $10 a lesson, which as Helen Arany, his patient, uncomplaining wife, admits, is bread and butter. But besides his great public concerts the composer must give occasional "private concerts." And for fourteen years or so Helen goes on pretending to believe in these mythical concerts, which conveniently cloak little affairs of the genius in his bungalow in the Catskills.

Just why Mrs. Arany suddenly takes one of them more seriously than those that went before is not quite apparent, but the departure of her husband, the revelation that a certain Mrs. Dallas has gone with him, and the visit of that lady's husband to her home, bring an otherwise slowly moving act to a capitally devised situation. From this point on the dialogue has great cleverness. A most adroitly written scene ends the first act.

Dr. Dallas and Mrs. Arany, both aiming at the same thing, the retention of their respective partner's affection and the avoidance of a clash or a scandal, hesitate about actually laying their cards on the table. Eventually, however, they come to an understanding and determine to follow to the Catskills. The author has proceeded with great brilliancy and skill, and, though the issue is never much in doubt, the successive incidents are so cleverly devised that laughter and interest are incessant.

To begin with, the silly little woman and the composer have a quarrel; his music again brings her to him. Then Mrs. Arany and Dr. Dallas arrive bent on proving that they have found themselves to be "affinities," and ready to exchange partners at once so long as they are convinced that the musician and Mrs. Dallas really love each other. The musician's discomfiture, his sudden bursts of anger, his utter impracticability, his complete dependence on the woman who has been mother as well as wife to him—these things, together with the sense of a really deep and lasting tenderness—a real love to contrast with just being in love, so suggestively conveyed by Mr. Ditrichstein in a sweep of the hands and a shrug of the shoulders, are all delicately conveyed in the writing and as clearly illuminated in the acting.

The latter half of this act with the musician and his wife at chess is a really remarkable bit of dramatic composition and Mr. Belasco has known how to make acting and arrangement, light and movement, in short every detail tell in a perfectly nuanced scene.

The humor of the subsequent act is at times not so fine—the continued interruption of Mrs. Dallas's breakfasting, and the banana incident, especially, being near to farce. But on the whole play and acting and two splendid settings—the one a solidly built interior of a bungalow—are as nearly illusive as seems possible.

A quartet of players carry the story with possibly a dozen to fill in the picture. But of the latter John Cope alone is of particular interest in a most amusingly acted sketch of an Irish servant. This is distinctly a case of an actor making his part, for the rôle in itself amounts to nothing. Catherine Proctor also contributes an excellent bit.

Of the principals Miss Jane Grey is lovely to look on, and she plays with no end of sauciness, sprit, and when need be, with real sentiment, while William Morris again satisfies with his directness, crispness, and generally fine method.

As the wife of the genius, Miss Janet Beecher has a rôle of peculiar difficulties—one which requires an ability to often convey far more than the lines tell, and Miss Beecher succeeds beautifully. Her playing is exquisite in its suggestion of patient good humor, underlying sweetness and persistent patience in the face of a difficult proposition.

As for Mr. Ditrichstein, his Gabor Arany is a complete and wholly gratifying impersonation, and by long odds the finest example of genuine comedy acting to be seen on our stage at present.

COLUMBIA TRUSTEES REMOVE PROF. PECK

BASED ON MISS QUINN'S SUIT

Anthon Professor Notifies Board Through His Lawyer That He Will Fight for Pension Rights.

Dr. Harry Thurston Peck, Anthon Professor of Latin in Columbia University, was notified yesterday that he had been dismissed from the university by the Board of Trustees on Monday. In the resolution dismissing him, the Trustees said that the board was of the opinion that the best interests of the university required that his official connection with the university should cease.

While none of the officials of the university would discuss the resolutions, it was understood that they were based upon the $100,000 breach of promise suit brought against Prof. Peck by Miss Quinn, who was once his stenographer.

Here is the resolution dismissing Prof. Peck:

> Whereas, By resolution of the Trustees heretofore adopted, Harry Thurston Peck was appointed Professor of the Latin Language and Literature during the pleasure of the Trustees, and has since continued to hold such professorship (now designated the Anthon Professorship of the Latin Language and Literature) subject to the pleasure of the Trustees, as required by the charter of the corporation; and
>
> Whereas, The Trustees are of the opinion that the best interests of the university require that his official connection with the university shall cease.
>
> Resolved, That the appointment of Harry Thurston Peck as Anthon Professor of the Latin Language and Literature in this university be, and the same hereby is terminated on the adoption of this resolution, and it is the pleasure of the Trustees that the employment of the said Harry Thurston Peck as such professor cease and determine forthwith, and the said professorship is hereby declared vacant.
>
> Resolved, That, in view of the long service of Prof. Peck to the university, the Treasurer be authorized to pay to Prof. Peck at once the amount of the salary that would have been paid to him if he had remained in the service of the corporation during the remainder of the current academic year.

Although the last paragraph of the resolution contained some balm in the form of a year's salary without work, Prof. Peck seemed not at all elated last night over the Trustees' action.

"No, I have nothing to say," he remarked sharply. "This isn't any joke; it's getting down to hard tacks now." The professor referred his questioners to his counsel for any further information.

That Prof. Peck does not mean to let the matter drop is evident from a communication which he sent yesterday to John B. Pine, Clerk of the Board of Trustees, in reply to the letter of dismissal. Here is his letter:

> To the Trustees of Columbia University:
>
> Gentlemen: I have received from John B. Pine, your clerk, a copy of a resolution which professes to abolish the Anthon chair in Columbia University and to terminate my employment as Professor of Latin since, as you say, such is the pleasure of the Trustees.
>
> I regard this action on your part as illegal and in violation of my contract with Columbia University. Every professor in that university holds a contractual relation with it which cannot be terminated at the pleasure of the Trustees or of the professor himself. I hold myself ready and am willing, and hereby offer to carry out all the terms of my agreement with the above institution.
>
> Inasmuch as you are acting in violation of the letter and spirit of the university charter and of my agreement with this institution, I insist on your carrying out your contract with me, and that you respect my contractual relations with the university.

C. D. Francis, counsel for Prof. Peck, said at the Yale Club last night the two remedies open to the professor are, an action for damages or an action for specific performance of his contract with Columbia. Prof. Peck has no written contract, Mr. Francis says, but he hopes to be able to prove a contractual relation between the professor and the university.

Mr. Francis lays stress upon the provision in paragraph 168, of the Columbia charter, that a Professor after fifteen years' service, if he has reached the age of sixty-five years, is entitled to be retired upon a pension. While Prof. Peck is only 54 years old, he has served Columbia for twenty-nine years, and it was Mr. Francis's contention that the university cannot dismiss him without a hearing.

Then, too, Dr. Peck's lawyer asserts that in the Columbia University charter of 1775 there is a provision that an officer cannot be expelled unless written charges are made against him. This ancient by-law, contends Mr. Francis, is still effective, because it has never been revoked.

When Prof. Peck was dismissed by the Board of Trustees on Monday, the Board acted upon the recommendation of the Education Committee, of which the Rev. Dr. E. B. Coe, is Chairman. That committee on June 1, 1910 suspended Prof. Peck "until the pleasure of the Trustees in his case can be ascertained." The action was taken, according to Prof. Peck, after President Nicholas Murray Butler had attempted to get him to resign.

At the time of his suspension by the Education Committee, Prof. Peck expressed himself in this way, concerning his relations with Miss Quinn and the right of the University Trustees to oust him.

> My contract as Anthon Professor allows me to remain in the post subject to the pleasure of the Trustees, and I shall have the word "pleasure" interpreted in the courts.
>
> The Trustees might all go off on a joy ride, for example, and think it was their "pleasure" under these circumstances to force me out. I'm not like some of the other members of the Faculty whom President Butler, during the last five years, has succeeded in forcing out of the university. I'm not going to jump overboard and drown. I believe that the Trustees can only dismiss me when definite charges are proved against me.
>
> Even Miss Quinn, who is suing me for breach of promise of marriage, does not assert that I have done anything immoral. On the contrary, she says she is an innocent young woman.

Following his suspension Prof. Peck in June attacked many officials connected with the university, especially President Butler. Prof. Peck declared that he had written a Latin oration which President Butler was about to deliver in Germany, and President Butler admitted that this was true. Then he referred to cases of Columbia professors who had suffered under what he called President Butler's "autocratic" administration of the university's affairs.

As examples of this Prof. Peck referred to several men who, according to him, had been driven from the university by the President. He also attacked Dr. Butler for usurping from the several faculties the power to appoint deans of the different schools and then using this power to confer these high posts upon "clerks out of his own office" instead of seeking out "men of mature judgment."

A week ago Prof. Peck sent a letter to each of the Trustees, in which he set forth his side of the controversy, and asked them to consider the matter well before taking final action. In this letter Prof. Peck said that while he had made numerous contributions to literature in the form of textbooks and other works "which have stood the test of time," his colleagues in the department, Profs. McCrea and Perry, had contributed nothing. The Trustees made no comment yesterday on the defense which Prof. Peck offered to them.

Prof. Peck was born in Stamford, Conn., in 1856. From Columbia University he received his A. B. degree in 1881. Then followed in succession the A. M., Ph. D., L. H. D., and finally the LL. D. degrees. Dr. Peck has also been honored in many other ways by his Alma Mater, having been appointed by both Presidents Low and Butler to posts of honor on ceremonial and other occasions.

MRS. FISKE'S LONG TOUR.

Will Present a New Comedy, "Mrs. Bumstead-Leigh," in Chicago.

Harrison Grey Fiske announced yesterday the plans for Mrs. Fiske's activities during the present season. Her tour, which began in Boston last April, has been continuous, including visits to the Pacific Coast and the Northwest, and on last Monday she began a month's engagement at the Grand Opera House, Chicago. During the entire tour she has presented "Becky Sharp" and "The Pillars of Society."

On Oct. 17 in Chicago she will present for the first time a new comedy called "Mrs. Bumstead-Leigh," by Harry James Smith, a novelist, and a one-act play entitled "The Shadow of the Glen," by J. M. Synge.

Between the end of her present tour and the beginning of her regular Fall and Winter season, Mrs. Fiske will have no rest. She will end her engagement in Chicago on Oct. 29 and will open in Buffalo the following Monday for a tour of the South, presenting "Becky Sharp" only. In March she will come to New York in a new production and will continue here until the end of the season. Besides "Mrs. Bumstead-Leigh" she has several other plays to select from for her New York engagement. One is a comedy by Langdon Mitchell and another is a drama, by Gertrude Atherton, called "Julia France." She also has a new play from the German, Americanized by a well-known playwright.

WHY THE DEACON AND LADY?

Kelly and Wynne Only Reason for New Musical Play's Existence.

"The Deacon and the Lady" which came into the New York Theatre last night might just as well be called "The Man and the Hat," "The Chorus and the Costumes," or any other such meaningless appellation. Both the Deacon and the lady were less in evidence than a good many other people and things, and so far as plot is concerned any sort of title would fit.

That the piece gives Harry Kelly an opportunity to appear in his old character of Deacon Flood and Ed Wynne a chance to exhibit his trained Panama hat, is about the only reason it has for existing. Neither the book nor the music possesses any particular novelty, and were it not for the people in the company, who are clever in a vaudeville sort of way, the entertainment would be worthy of little more than a mention.

Harry Kelly is funny, however, and Ed Wynne made many friends through his appearance in vaudeville. Eva Fallon sings nicely, Clara Palmer has a certain sort of appeal in a humorous way, Dorothy Homer is an energetic dancer and Mayme Gehrue is another, while Madelyne Marshall amuses by her old character sketch of the Deacon's daughter. The scenery and costumes are fresh and bright and the chorus is good looking. A double sextet called "I Must Find Some One Pleased" pleased the audience last night, and Clara Palmer was frequently recalled for her song, "Tiger Love." Two or three other numbers aroused a good deal of applause.

JEWS MADE CRIMINALS.

Russia's New Policy Spells Humiliation to Israel, Rabbi Wise Says.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, in his sermon on the Jewish New Year at Carnegie Hall yesterday, preaching to the Free Synagogue, declared that the status of the Jew in Russia to-day constitutes an indictment of Russia and marks the unutterable humiliation of Israel. The former policy of massacre, he said, has given way to one of peaceful extermination, by means of a commercial boycott, causing the deepest poverty.

Jewish soldiers, he said, after honorably completing their terms of service in the Russian Army, are not permitted to return to their home towns; educational facilities have been lessened, and in one town all Jews are registered in the criminal department.

"The Jews are driven into the attitude of revolt against an intolerable Government and then are scourged as revolutionists," he said. "Russia cannot enter the temple of freedom as long as there exists a pale of settlement for the Jews. Let Russia be outlawed by the nations until outlawry ceases to be the law of its own Government."

GATTI-CASAZZA BACK FROM EUROPE

Sole Manager of Metropolitan Opera House Tells of Plans for the Season.

PUCCINI TO SAIL ON NOV. 9

For Rehearsals of "Girl of the Golden West"—Humperdinck's Opera, "Koenigskinder," to be Given in December.

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, this year the sole manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, arrived last night on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, with his wife, Mme. Alda, the soprano, after a tempestuous voyage. Directly after landing they drove to Sherry's in a motor car and today Mr. Gatti-Casazza will be at his desk in the Metropolitan.

"The reports which have come to this country in regard to Puccini's illness are unfounded," he said; "the composer is in the best of health. It is also untrue that the Italian government is making trouble about the plan to produce his new opera 'The Girl of the Golden West' for the first time on any stage in New York.

"Toscanini will sail about Oct. 14 and Puccini will sail Nov. 9. Directly after his arrival rehearsals will commence of 'The Girl of the Golden West,' and it will be produced in December. Mr. Ricordi, the publisher, has passed on the cast of the opera, which in New York will include Mme. Destinn and Messrs. Caruso and Amato. In Boston the opera will be sung by Mme. Carmen-Melis and Messrs. Baklanoff and Constantino.

"Englebert Humperdinck will arrive on Dec. 6, and his new opera, 'Königskinder,' will be produced at the Metropolitan some time before Christmas. It was originally intended to produce this work in English, but as the work was written in German we have decided that it stands more show of artistic success if it is presented in that language.

Mme. Alda, wearing sables and a stunning hat of an original design, said that she had just sung in two performances of "La Bohème" at Brussels with Mr. Caruso, the receipts for which reached 40,000 francs.

"I shall not sing at the Metropolitan this year," she said. "None of the other members of the company can say that I interfere with the répertoire or usurp any of the rôles. I am to sing in Boston, where I shall appear in a new part, Puccini's 'Manon Lescaut,' and I shall sing in concert. I have twenty-two concerts booked for the first six weeks of my tour, and the first week I sing in Boston I am to be heard three times."

George Maxwell, the New York agent of the firm of Ricordi & Co., and F. C. Coppicus, Mr. Gatti-Casazza's new secretary, were also on the boat.

SELECT "THE OTHER MARY."

Boyesen's Play to be First Produced at Sunday Night Performances.

William A. Brady and the Shuberts announced yesterday that the first play to be given at Daly's Theatre in the series of twenty-five Sunday night performances for the American Stage Society would be "The Other Mary," a new play by Algernon Boyesen. This performance will be given on the evening of Oct. 23. Carlotta Nillson will have the leading rôle, and others in the cast will be Frederick Perry, Ivy Troutman, and Bertha Welby.

Among the other plays selected by Mr. Brady and the Shuberts are "The eBst People," "The End of Eustace Ede," and other unusual dramas. Algernon Boyesen, author of "The Other Mary," is a son of the Norwegian author, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, and is a professor in Columbia University.

SAVE MRS. RINEHART'S SIGHT

But Author Will Have to Curtail Her Work—To Go to Europe.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, one of the authors of "Seven Days," will sail for Europe next Saturday assured that her sight will be preserved. A few weeks ago it was reported that she was threatened with total blindness, but after treatment in New York she is now said to be out of danger. Her work, however, will have to be curtailed, and she will be obliged hereafter to dictate her stories and plays to her secretary, instead of writing them in long hand, as has been her custom.

On her trip abroad Mrs. Rinehart will be accompanied by her husband, Dr. S. M. Rinehart, and their three boys. Dr. Rinehart will devote most of his time to post-graduate study of lung diseases.

'Speckled Band' to be Staged in Boston

Charles Frohman has made arrangements to have the exclusive use of the Boston Theatre in Boston for the preparation and first performances of such of his plays that cannot find place in New York. He went to Boston yesterday to complete the plans for the first performance to be given there. This will take place on Oct. 25, when the new Conan Doyle play, "The Speckled Band," will be produced. The company that is to present this play is headed by Edwin Stevens, and will leave for Boston to-day to begin rehearsals there.

R. B. DAVIS SUES WIFE.

Rich Man Says She Tried to Put Him in an Asylum—Asks Divorce.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 4.—Robert Benson Davis, the baking powder manufacturer, has filed suit in the Superior Court here for divorce. This was discovered to-day when his wife demanded $5,000 a month alimony, $5,000 for costs, and $10,000 for attorneys' fees.

No decision was given on her demands, but the complaint of the husband, which was made public, reveals charges that his wife and her relatives tried to have him committed to an asylum for the insane.

Davis charges his wife with trying to dispose of him to get control of his fortune, and blames her relatives for poisoning her mind against him. He even alleges he was under a system of espionage in his own home, where he claims he was held a prisoner.

The complaint sets forth that while he was being held a prisoner in his own house there was a conspiracy further to depress him by submitting to him a physician's report that he was suffering from tuberculosis. He insists he is hale and hearty despite his 66 years.

The Davises were married in 1881. Their married life, he says, had been happy until his house became crowded with his wife's relatives. And he especially names Harry W. Weed, his brother-in-law, as having been an eavesdropper who took down conversations in shorthand to be used against him in the attempt to have him placed in an asylum.

The complaint states that during his illness his wife would nag him and Weed irritate him into bursts of temper, which were further aggravated when Weed began taking stenographic notes of his language.

He charges that his wife telephoned to members of a corporation of which he was President that he was insane and that she and her relatives were holding a conference with alienists to have him locked up when he escaped. He cites his business success since his escape as proof of his sanity.

Stocks Rally After Morning Decline—Call Money Rates, 2⅜@2⅞ Per Cent.

TRADING IN SMALLER VOLUME

Day's Market News Included Better European Copper Statistics and Substantial Sales of Steel Rails.

In the fore part of yesterday's stock market session there developed a volume of profit taking sales sufficient to check the vigorous rise in prices under way at the close of business on Monday night. Declines of from 1 to 2 points were registered in a number of shares which had been conspicuous in the week long advance, but the maximum losses were to be found in only a few issues and at no time was the market permitted to get out of hand. Trading diminished as prices declined and before noon the market had come to a practical standstill. After resting this way for some little time it began to creep forward slowly and quietly, as it has so often done in the past under similar circumstances, and, moving in the same direction steadily, closed the day with the morning recessions recovered and in numerous cases with something added. Interesting from the purely technical point of view was the persistent report that there had been brought together a number of speculative interests of rather larger calibre than the general run for the purpose of undertaking a campaign for the rise. This seems to have been borne out by the conduct of the market and a reading of the stock list makes clear the principal securities involved in the undertaking.

Perhaps some of the inertia displayed by the market was due to the absence of news of the importance which has attached to that of recent days. Advices from Europe regarding the statistical position of copper were much more encouraging than of late, noting a very sharp fall in visible supplies. Assurances were forthcoming from large steel interests that the cuts in iron announced late on Monday were a minor factor in the business as a whole, and offsetting these there was the news that one of the large Southern railroad systems had just placed an order for 15,000 tons of steel rails at the regular price, with the intention of following this up by another purchase of 5,000 tons in the near future. The amounts are small, of course, but the buying is nevertheless significant, for it undoubtedly reflects a necessity which is very general among the railroads and which will doubtless be satisfied at the first opportunity. Earnings statements submitted during the day continue the tendency of earlier reports as to increasing operating charges, but so far at least it is worth noting that gross still inclines to gain. The cotton market was excited, with violent fluctuations in both directions and final quotations at a level above that reached on Monday night following the publication of the Government report.

No changes of importance occurred in the money market. Here call money was a trifle easier and the banks reported a much smaller loss to the Sub-Treasury since Friday last than they faced in the corresponding period a week ago. Foreign exchange was also quiet, and so far at least there has been little opportunity for forming judgment as to what correction the banks may be able to make in the situation disclosed in last week's Clearing House statement.

The Opinion of Experts

If you have money to invest, you should focus your attention upon the situation now existing in the bond market. Prices of high-grade bonds are lower than they have been for a long time, notwithstanding that the value and earning power of the properties securing the bonds were never greater than at present. If, as is predicted by experts, lower interest rates are to prevail once the crops are moved, high-grade bonds purchased now are certain to prove profitable investments.

If you are especially interested in Railroad Bonds, write for our Circular No. 821. If you prefer high-grade Corporation Bonds yielding about 5%, write for Circular No. 823.

MONEY EASE

Bonds will advance further in price, due to the outlook for low interest rates and the doubtful business future.

We will mail those interested a description of two methods of purchasing bonds, as well as special list as suggestions.

Improvement

The bond market shows indications of broadening, prices of investment bonds are slightly higher, and bonds are becoming scarcer. However, many safe first mortgage bonds are still obtainable to yield from 5% to 7%.

For instance, we offer a First Mortgage Steam Railroad Bond to yield 5.20%. The road is bonded at $8,000 a mile, and net earnings for the year ended June 30, 1910, were about 3 times interest charges. The country served is fertile and productive, and the road's freight revenue is largely derived from the transportation of agricultural products.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—Something probably unique in the history of street railways and banking was produced to-day in the shape of a petition on the part of a number of banks and trust companies requesting a member of a big banking firm to serve on the board of a traction company. The local financial institutions in question are asking E. T. Stotesbury to go on the Rapid Transit Directorate. This piece of news came out just before the close of the market, but throughout the session all sorts of rumors were going the rounds. Mr. Stotesbury is not only asked to become a Director, but the power to select all the members of the board will be given to him. The present Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit will unanimously approve and sign the request to Mr. Stotesbury.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Tuesday.

Coincident with the reactionary tendencies exhibited in the forenoon trading the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange became less broad than was the case the day before, although business continued active. There was large profit taking but the offerings were well absorbed. The market showed renewed strength in the afternoon. The list for the day comprised fifty-six different stocks with total sales of 61,200 shares.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Resort to Philosophy.

As an illustration of the philosophy which Wall Street brings to bear upon mildly unpleasant developments, the explanation offered by traders yesterday for the reactionary tendency of the stock market in the forenoon was nearly perfect. It was recalled that in the days of sustained bear markets Tuesday was invariably a day of reaction. For what reason nobody knew, although various guesses were forthcoming. So far from being a source of anxiety, therefore, the retrograde movement in prices early yesterday was to be considered as highly significant and encouraging because it conformed so exactly to conditions heretofore existing in rising markets. One of the great French philosophers ventured the assertion that philosophy could cope with the past and the future, but was overcome always by the present, which proves that he formed this opinion before Wall Street came into existence to confute it.

Money and the Market.

A good deal of comment has been invited by the failure of call and time money rates on Stock Exchange collateral to reflect the actual money situation, as disclosed in last week's bank statement. In some quarters the hasty conclusion has been reached that the persistent ease, or relative ease, of rates under the circumstances prove that bankers look upon present conditions as temporary. This may be true, but another explanation quite as plausible is that there has been practically no change in the demand for money for Stock Exchange purposes to test the market. It has been recognized for a long time that a majority of the larger houses in the Street practically oversupplied themselves with time funds many weeks ago, and those relying upon call money have had this supply at their command and have also benefited by the fact that the lending banks have been anxious to keep their money in liquid form. An example of the situation with a number of houses was furnished by one in particular last week upon the occasion of the sharp rise in call rates to 2½ per cent. This house earlier in the day had decided that it would not need some of the funds it had on hand and put them out at 2 per cent. Later it was forced to go into the money market itself and borrow at the top figure of the day.

***

Pennsylvania and New Haven.

It seems to be the opinion in railroad and banking circles that the purpose of the increase which is to be made in the membership of the Board of Directors of the New Haven at the annual meeting on Oct. 26 is to provide room for additional Pennsylvania Railroad representatives. The board will be enlarged by two members, and if those selected are Pennsylvania men it will give that road four memberships in the board, as President McCrea and T. De Witt Cuyler are already Directors. The full New Haven Board will then consist of twenty-seven members. The Pennsylvania in its last annual report acknowledged ownership of 10,000 shares of New Haven stock and $375,000 of New Haven convertibles, but Wall Street believes that its real voice in New Haven affairs is inadequately represented by these public holdings.

***

Foreign Copper Stocks Lower.

Again in September the stocks of copper held abroad and the foreign visible supply of the metal made substantial decreases, and the falling off each month, which has now been continuous since early in the year, has reached a very considerable total when the present figures are contrasted with those of last Winter. The worth of the figures in relation to the real position of the metal may be disputed, but the statistics make an impressive showing, especially now, when the curtailment, which has been in force at the mines since the early Summer, is beginning to make itself felt at the refineries, and therefore in the returns of the Producers' Association. The high record of copper stocks abroad was 242,435,200 pounds at the end of February. On Sept. 30 they were reported at 184,108,200 pounds. This decline of 58,240,000 pounds represents a drop of 24 per cent. during the period. Visible supplies have fallen off 16 per cent in the same period, having decreased from the high record of 254,150,450 pounds reached in February to 211,276,800 on Sept. 30.

***

Another Holiday.

Columbus Day is too new to be familiar as a holiday, and when the word went around yesterday that the Stock Exchange would be closed on Wednesday, Oct. 12, there were few brokers who had counted on a holiday this month. The fact that it is a legal holiday only in this State somewhat complicates matters for the cotton and grain traders.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Fidelity Trust Company at Chambers Street and West Broadway has been designated a depository for the general funds of the State of New York.

Potter, Choate & Prentice are offering the unsold portion of $1,500,000 Public Service Corporation of New Jersey three-year collateral 5 per cent. notes, due Oct. 1, 1913, at a price to yield 5½ per cent.

Finley Barrell & Co. announce that Frederick R. Babcock has withdrawn from the firm. The business will be continued by Finley Barrell and Peter J. Maloney, both Stock Exchange members. The capital of the firm will remain the same, Mr. Barrell having contributed in addition to his previous interest the same amount as that withdrawn by Mr. Babcock. Mr. Barrell has applied for membership in the Cotton Exchange.

The committee of bondholders of the International Traction Company announces that more than a majority in amount of the fifty-year 4 per cent. collateral trust bonds of the company has been deposited under the agreement, and that it has made the necessary arrangement for an advance to the holders of certificates of deposit of the interest due on July 1, 1910. Such interest will be advanced upon presentation thereof at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., the Manufacturers and Traders National Bank, [illegible] the United States [illegible] Louisville, Ky.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Money and discount rates were firm to-day.

The stock market was quiet and somewhat heavy, owing to lack of pronounced support. British securities were easier, but foreign bonds and Kaffirs hardened. Rubber shares recovered after a weak opening, the auction prices of crude rubber being better than anticipated.

American securities opened slightly higher, but immediately sold off under realizing. An easy tone prevailed until New York raised values in the afternoon. Renewed offerings caused another decline in the late trading, and the market closed easy.

Bar silver steady at 24 13-16d per ounce.

Money, 2½ per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 3⅝ per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: At Madrid, 7; at Lisbon, 3.50.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Prices were generally firm on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 12½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 24c for checks.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—The fears of a lock-out of the metal workers throughout Germany caused weaker prices on the Boerse to-day.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 45½ pfennigs for checks.

Money, 4½ per cent.

Private discount rate, 3⅞ per cent.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

The wheat market after a slow morning turned strong, and closed at near best prices and at a good advance in all markets. The advance appeared to come from a stampede of shorts on reports of serious damage in the Argentine from drought. The Argentine report was that while the area of wheat increased 15 per cent. the crop had been damaged 25 per cent. by drought and also injured by locusts; this report lacked confirmation. The market, however, was evidently oversold by the persistent decline of the last two weeks, and rallied easily. The cables have been very steady for several days, although cable bids have been unsatisfactory on both American and Canadian wheat. While there was a large increase in the visible supply, the American total gaining 2,604,000 bushels and the Canadian 3,684,000 bushels, the total increase in the visible of 6,288,000 bushels compared with a gain the previous week of 9,813,000 bushels and a gain last year of 17,365,000 bushels. The smaller gain was due to a small decrease in the European stocks, compared with a heavy increase last week and last year. This decrease was due to the arrival and distribution of heavy previous shipments, while recent shipments have been decreasing. Export bids were out of line except on Manitoba wheat, of which 14 loads were reported taken. Cash wheat: No. 2 red, Winter, $1.02¼, elevator; No. 2 red, spot, nominal, new, $1.01¾, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.20½; No. 2 hard Winter, new, $1.04⅞; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.08.

Corn was very firm and closed at about the best. The market was affected by the report of unsettled weather through the Central West and lake region and by the reports of lighter country offerings, while the advance in wheat stimulated a good deal of speculative buying. The receipts have decreased perceptibly this week at the interior. Bradstreet's visible increased only 811,000 bushels, compared with 440,000 bushels last week and 700,000 bushels last year. Cash corn quoted: No. 2, 60c, to arrive, cost, insurance, and freight, elevator, domestic basis, and steamer, nominal, elevator, export basis. Sales include 96,000 bushels outports, part late Monday.

Oats also displayed a good deal of firmness and closed at a good advance for the day. Shorts were active buyers, and there was a good volume of commission house buying, due to reports of decreasing interior offerings and to a decrease of 560,000 bushels in the visible compared with an increase of 1,070,000 bushels last year. The distribution of oats seems to have overtaken the supply. Cash oats quoted: Standards, 39c; No. 2 white, 39½c; No. 3 white, 38½c; No. 4 white, 37½c; natural white, 38½@40c; white, clipped, 39½@42c.

Provisions were active and decidedly irregular. The market was weak, with quite pronounced selling during the morning, owing to a further break in live hogs, but the total receipts of live hogs were light, and later, when the early sellers tried to buy, the market reacted easily. Stocks are small and the market is very sensitive.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The oil market was very quiet early and prices were offered down on reports of lower crude market, but later there was a decided turn for the better, trade became active, and prices advanced readily. Buying was stimulated by reports of very firm crude markets, and that offerings of crude were on a small scale. Crushers are unwilling to offer excepting where seed is available, and are unwilling to offer for forward deliveries in volume, owing to the uncertainty as to seed prices. The foreign markets were decidedly strong on linseed and linseed oil. The Duluth market showed 16c advance on linseed for the day. The strength of cotton was another important factor in the advance.

COTTON.

The cotton market was active and strong. Prices advanced during the morning about 20 points, losing part of the advance in the afternoon. The opening was a little irregular, due to lower cables than expected, but the early selling was quickly absorbed, and prices began to work upward to new high levels. The buying by Wall Street and Western houses and by warehouses generally was very active, while there was large covering of shorts, and spot houses appeared to be heavy buyers, thought to be taking in hedges against spot cotton. The afternoon reaction was in part due to heavy selling by a prominent commission house thought to be profit taking for the large operator in the market. The Liverpool reports were of probably an early settlement of the Manchester labor question. The dispute, it was claimed, was not so much a wage matter, but a desire to influence the market in order to buy spot cotton owing to the heavy commitments ahead on goods. The weather conditions were somewhat unsettled through the South, and while the rain will be favorable for the later cotton, still it interrupts the picking and the movement to market. There is continued disposition to look for a probable cotton crop less than the Government indications point to, and the popular interpretation of the report is for a crop barely 1,000,000 bales in excess of last year.

Southern spot markets unchanged to ⅛ advance.

COFFEE.

The coffee market developed a reactionary tendency under further liquidation on the part of speculative longs, and at the close prices were 9 to 20 points net lower, with sales of 17,750 bags. The European markets were lower, Havre showing a loss of ¼ to ½ franc, while Hamburg was ½ to ¾ pfennig lower. Sentiment was somewhat less bullish, although the fact that the market has shown hesitation at the recent advance and had become less active was considered not an unfavorable sign, especially as there was comparatively little disposition to favor the short side. Some operators seemed disposed to apply considerable significance to the fact that receipts at Santos so far this year are nearly 1,000,000 bags over last year, when the crop turned out about 9,500,000 bags, whereas this year the estimates are from 8,000,000 to 8,500,000. Prices in the local market, however, are below a parity with the primary markets, and on this account traders are not disposed to favor the short side, especially as spot coffee is also above a parity with futures. The world's visible supply statement for September showed an increase of 507,208 bags, against an increase last year of 1,171,430. The Brazilian markets were irregular, Santos being unchanged to 50 reis lower, while Rio was 100 reis higher, and Brazilian exchange on London showed an advance of 3-32d, bringing the rate to 8 1-32d. Weather conditions were reported fine in all five coffee districts following the recent rains.

In the local spot market trading was very inactive, with buyers apparently indifferent, but prices were steady on the basis of 11c for Rio No. 7.

"My Son Having Failed Completely in his preliminary examinations for college, entered your school and in one year he covered two regular school years of work as is done at most schools, and not only passed his examinations easily for college, but also with credit to himself and his school."

This extract of a letter from the mother of a recent student is one of a hundred or more, valued by Mr. Groff, showing the high grade of success he has had for thirteen years, following the idea that the individual, and not the class, is the unit.

Timid, nervous and backward boys are encouraged and taught how to study. Bright boys advanced rapidly and thoroughly. No cramming. Secret is to make an hour count for an hour under expert teachers and an up-to-date system. The definite policy is to gain the real interest of the boys in their work, thereby making petty restrictions unnecessary.

Mr. Groff's close personal attention devoted to the two schools. Headmasters of both schools now in their offices.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Importers Lose in Long-Contested Controversy Over Figured Cotton Goods.

According to a decision handed down yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers, importers fail to recover thousands of dollars in refunds in excessive duties alleged to be collected by the Customs authorities. The issue before the customs tribunal stands in the names of W. B. Quaintance and involves the classification under the tariff act of 1897, of figured cotton cloth.

The question of the classification of figured cotton goods has been before the Board of General Appraisers in one form or the other ever since the Dingley Tariff was enacted as long ago as 1897. Reduced to its last analysis, the controversy resolves itself into a trade competition between the foreign and domestic makers of colored textile fabrics. The Board of General Appraisers appears to have been mystified as to what the correct classification should be.

The result has been conflicting decisions, and a general confusion in the importing mind as to what classification should be imposed. While conflicting decisions have been handed down by the board and the courts, the ruling made by General Appraiser Cooper, in the present case, appears to be controlling in the absence of an appeal to the United States Court of Customs Appeals. As the matter stands, in the case of Quaintance, now decided by the Board, a definite standard is laid down for the guidance of future importations of these goods.

General Appraiser Cooper lays down these rules:

"In determining whether or not cotton cloth is subject to the ad valorem rates of duty in paragraphs 305 and 306, tariff act of 1897, the value of the cloth in its entirety is to be considered, and not the value of the foundation threads exclusive of the threads added to form a figure, by reason of which the cloth is subject to the additional duty in paragraph 313 of said act.

"Section 19, Customs Administrative Act of 1890, is not merely a definition of market value but also a guide to the proper application of ad valorem duties. Where the tariff act makes merchandise rutiable at an ad valorem rate, this section is conclusive as to the value on which such rate of duty shall be figured."

In finding against the importer the Board holds that the classification as imposed is correct and must be upheld. The importer's protests are accordingly overruled, and the decision of the Collector of Customs affirmed.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

AT A SPECIAL TERM OF THE UNITED States District Court for the Southern District of New York, held at the Post Office Building in the Borough of Manhattan, in the State, City, and County of New York, on the 3d day of October, 1910. Present, Honorable George C. Holt, United States District Judge.—In the matter of the petition to have SPENCER LEASING COMPANY OF GREATER NEW YORK, a corporation, adjudged an involuntary bankrupt.

Whereas a petition was on the 7th day of September, 1910, filed herein for an adjudication of bankruptcy against Spencer Leasing Company of Greater New York, a corporation, and it appearing to my satisfaction by the affidavits of Edward A. Turner and Saul Abraham, and Daniel W. Blumenthal, verified the 29th day of September, 1910, that a subpoena directed to the alleged bankrupt herein was duly issued out of this court to the Marshal for the Southern District of New York, and that said Marshal has been unable to serve the same on the said corporation, or upon any of its officers; and it appearing that personal service cannot be made upon any officer of the said alleged bankrupt corporation, and that diligent efforts have been made to ascertain the whereabouts of the officers of the said corporation, and that there are no officers of the said corporation now within the jurisdiction of this court, or who are known to reside at this time within the Southern District of New York;

Now, on motion of Maurice B. and Daniel W. Blumenthal, attorneys for the petitioning creditors herein, it is Ordered that the Spencer Leasing Company of Greater New York, the alleged bankrupt herein, appear before the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, at a stated term thereof to be held, in bankruptcy, in the Post Office Building, in the Borough of Manhattan, City, County, and State of New York, on the 24th day of October, 1910, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, to answer, demur, or otherwise plead to the petition in involuntary bankruptcy filed in the office of the Clerk of this court on the 7th day of September, 1910, against it, and in case of the failure to appear, answer, demur, or otherwise plead, adjudication shall be made according to the prayer of said petition; and it is further Ordered that a copy of this order be published in The New York Times, a daily newspaper published in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, in said Southern District, twice a week for two consecutive weeks, the last of said publication to be on the 12th day of October, 1910, and by mailing a copy of this order and the affidavits upon which it was granted, together with a copy of the petition for adjudication to the last known place of abode of Willis A. Lane, at 821 West 178th Street, New York City, and the last known place of abode of Edward W. Osann, at 78 Broad Street, New York City, in said district, on or before the day of the first publication.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The storm which has been causing extensive rains in the middle States from the great lakes southward over the central valleys to the Gulf of Mexico has gradually lost energy, but it is being succeeded by another storm which is advancing from the West, the cnetre of which is now in Manitoba. Another storm is reaching southward from Alaska and is already causing rains in the North Pacific region. Fair weather has continued in Atlantic Coast sections with the exception of light showers in Northern New England and along the South Atlantic Coast. While the temperature will fall somewhat in the Mississippi Valley, high temperatures will be general east of the Mississippi for several days.

The winds along the New England Coast will be brisk south; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate south southwest; South Atlantic Coast, moderate southeast½ East Gulf Coast, moderate southeast with squalls.

Steamers departing Wednesday for European ports will have moderate to brisk south wind with generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

B. Altman & Co. Buy Madison Avenue Corner and Now Control Entire Square Block—Demand for Tenements as Investments—Renewed Activity in Auction Market.

Details of the purchase by B. Altman & Co. of the northwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, a plot [illegible] by 145, which with the long-term leases that B. Altman & Co. have on other parcels in the block not occupied by the Altman store, now giving that firm control of the entire block from Fifth to Madison Avenue, Thirty-fourth to Thirty-fifth Street, will be found in another column.

Mutual Bank Buys 33d Street Plot.

The officers of the Mutual Bank announced yesterday that they were the purchasers of the property at 49 and 51 West Thirty-third Street, sold last week and stated on the previous day as having been purchased by Alexander P. W. Kinnan of the real estate firm of J. Romaine Brown & Co. Mr. Kinnan, it was explained, acted for the Mutual Bank. For several years the bank has occupied the ground floor of the old Alpine building on the northeast corner of Broadway and Thirty-third Street. This forms part of the McAlpin block recently leased for a $5,000,000 hotel, and all the tenants moved out last week.

The Mutual Bank is the only McAlpin tenant there having a long lease, which extends to May, 1912, and from present indications it is the purpose of the bank to remain. The Thirty-third Street property, which adjoins the McAlpin block, has been bought as the future quarters of the bank. The new building, it was intimated, would probably be a twelve-story office structure, the bank occupying the lower part.

Sale in the "Penn" Loft Zone.

The demand for modern loft buildings in the Pennsylvania Station loft zone was shown yesterday in the sale of 555 and 557 West Thirty-sixth Street by the Donnelly estate. Standing on this plot, which is 50 by 100, are two old buildings, which will be demolished by the buyer, who will erect for his own use a modern loft structure. The property has been in the Donnelly family and has not changed hands since 1869. Kennelly & Co. negotiated the sale.

Hudson Street Building Sold.

David Lipmann and Sampson Schwartz have sold through H. C. Senior & Co. the three-story building 577 Hudson Street, on a lot 18 by 75. The buyer is an investor.

Growing Demand for Tenement Property.

Tenement house property both on the east and west sides of Manhattan has found ready buyers recently. A few years ago this class of real estate was looked upon with great favor by operators and investors.

Then there was a falling off in the demand, and investments were placed in flats and apartments. Now there is an oversupply of the latter, which are costly to maintain and difficult to turn over to an advantage just at present. As a result many brokers have inquiries for the cheaper grade of tenements.

Two sales of this character were recorded yesterday. The Oakley estate sold 407 West Nineteenth Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 80, near the corner of Ninth Avenue. The property was to have been offered at auction yesterday by Joseph P. Day in the Vesey Street salesroom, but it was purchased by an investor and the sale called off at the last minute. The other sale was in the old Greenwich Village section, where Henry A. Wingart sold the old four-story tenement, 337 West Thirteenth Street, on a lot 18.9 by 80, adjoining the northeast corner of Hudson Street.

A Lively Auction Market.

There was a good attendance at the Vesey Street salesroom yesterday and spirited bidding for several valuable parcels of city and suburban property. Joseph P. Day conducted an auction sale of the right, title, and interest of John B. H. Oakley, deceased, to four properties in Manhattan and a plot in Mamaroneck, Westchester County. The sale was by order of the Supreme Court, as the result of an action brought by Charles P. Bulkley, as guardian, against Frances P. S. Oakley and other defendants.

For a one-fifth interest in the property 154 and 156 West Broadway E. B. Slamon paid $4,550 over prior liens of $38,000. W. H. Ramsey bid $8,000 over prior mortgages aggregating $124,500 for a one-fifth interest in the premises 2,041 to 2,055 Seventh Avenue. Mr. Ramsey also secured a one-half interest in the property 707 Greenwich Street on a bid of $600 over prior liens of $24,000. For a one-half interest in a plot 325 by about 140 on Park Avenue, at Larchmont, R. B. Aldcrafft, Jr., paid $3,000 over prior liens of $8,600.

Another interesting sale was conducted by Bryan L. Kennelly, who sold twenty-two parcels at Oakdale, L. I. Among the buyers were Mrs. Herman Reitz, John A. Tallman, W. E. Morgan, and William V. Taylor. The property all fronted on Bay View Drive, the plots having a frontage of 50 feet and varying in depth from 125 to 285 feet. Prices ran from $50 to $100 per plot.

A $35,000 Brooklyn Deal.

George H. Willers, formerly the proprietor of the old Riding Academy at the corner of Bedford and Atlantic Avenues, has purchased a plot of lots on the southeast side of Ocean Avenue, near Lincoln Road, and will erect thereon an up-to-date riding academy. The deal involves about $35,000.

Staten Island Sale.

J. Sterling Drake, broker, has sold for Mrs. Minnie E. French of Brooklyn to the Rev. William E. Palmer, seven lots, 175 by 100, on the east side of Manor Road, between Forest Avenue and Raymond Place, West New Brighton, S. I.

Centre Island Property Sold.

The W. J. White place at Centre Island, Oyster Bay, L. I., has been sold by Henry D. Winans & May. The property consists of fifty acres with riparian rights, and has water frontage on three sides—Long Island Sound, Cold Spring Harbor, and Oyster Bay. There is a modern Colonial residence, outbuildings, stable, garage, farmhouse, &c., on the property.

The place was purchased by Mr. White in 1908 and immediately adjoins to the west the property of Mr. Sheldon, which was formerly the Wetmore place. The entire island is given over to a half dozen handsome estates. The purchasers are acquiring the property for their own occupancy, and after a limited period will erect a new and costly mansion.

Long Island Estates Sold.

W. Burling Cocks and Samuel Willets report the following sales on Long Island: The Agostino Mazzoni property at Woodbury, to Howard Page; the Sarah Van Cott farm at Brookville, to C. Oliver Iselin; the Arthur Weeks property at Mill Neck to Henry L. Batterman; the Benjamin W. Downing woodland at Wheatley to Ralph N. Ellis, and the E. T. Payne property to F. W. M. Cutcheon.

New Development at Babylon.

Work has been started by the Colonial Development Corporation of Babylon on its tract at Babylon. The first section is being macadamized and cement sidewalks are being laid. The property will be connected with the new water system which the town is installing. B. O. Smith is the head of the company.

Loans on Heights Apartment Houses.

W. P. Westervelt has placed the following loans for Etta Seligmann: A mortgage of $44,000, at 5 per cent., for five years, on the premises 241 and 243 West 142d Street, a five-story apartment house on lot 50 by 99.11; for the Saginaw Holding Company, a mortgage of $47,000 at 5 per cent., for five years, on a five-story apartment house 604 and 606 West 178th Street, on a plot 50 by 100. For the same owners a mortgage of $47,000 at 5 per cent., for five years, on a five-story apartment house at 608 and 610 West 178th Street, on a plot 50 by 100; also, negotiated a loan of $49,000 at 5½ per cent., for five years, for the Lavelle Real Estate Company, on the premises located on Southern Boulevard, southwest corner of 176th Street, Bronx, on a plot 53 by 122, on which is a six-story apartment house.

Sixteen Dwellings at Auction.

At the Vesey Street Salesroom to-day Herbert A. Sherman will offer at auction for the account of the Hamilton Securities Company the row of sixteen newly erected dwellings on Walton Avenue, at Fordham Road, Bronx. The houses are three-story and basement in height, arranged for one family. The sale is the result of Supreme Court proceedings to recover about $100,000.

Huber's Casino Leased.

J. B. English has leased to B. K. and H. Bimberg, brothers of the late Bim the button man and theatre builder, Huber's Casino, music hall, ballroom, tennis courts, and oval located on the corner of 162d Street and Jerome Avenue, for a term of forty-two years. The business has been conducted by George H. Huber for the past twenty-seven years, this being the first change in that time. The plot covers twenty-four city lots and is at the entrance of the new station of the proposed Jerome Avenue Subway. The property faces Macomb's Dam Park. Mr. Huber recently sold his museum on Fourteenth Street, and will retire from active business.

Brooklyn Foreclosure Sale.

A Supreme Court foreclosure sale of Brooklyn factory property will be held by Joseph P. Day at the Brooklyn Real Estate Exchange, 189 Montague Street, to-day. The plot, 200 by 207, and nine buildings, are located in a section where good shipping and transit facilities are obtainable. An entire machinery plant is included in the sale.

Notes.

Justice Guy has appointed Henry Brady receiver of premises 434 West 125th Street pending foreclosure of mortgage.

P. J. Ryan, for several years with the sales department of the H. M. Weill Company, is now connected with the office of Kennelly & Co.

Mrs. N. J. Erneman is the buyer of 354 West End Avenue, sold recently by C. E. Bayne. F. R. Wood & Co. were the brokers.

FINE CROP WEATHER.

Whole Country Blessed with Bright Sunshine, Says Agricultural Bulletin.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Weather conditions with regard to agriculture were favorable during the past week over the greater portion of the country although it was unusually dry and generally warm, according to the National Weekly Weather Bulletin of the Department of Agriculture issued to-day. It says:

"Over the corn-growing States the dry weather with much sunshine and warmth was very favorable for maturing the late crops, and the ground was generally in good condition for plowing and preparation of the soil for seeding.

"Over the cotton-growing States east of the Mississippi the week was warm throughout. Some good rains occurred in South Carolina and at local points in other States, but, as a rule, little rain occurred and the soil is becoming generally very dry.

"In the cotton-growing States west of the Mississippi showers occurred in many parts of Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma and small amounts were received at a number of points in Texas, but over much of the State there was little or no rain. Unusually warm weather continued, especially in Oklahoma and Texas, and the ground is becoming exceedingly dry in many parts of those States.

"Over the Atlantic Coast States, from the Carolinas northward, warm, dry and sunshiny weather was very favorable for ripening and gathering the agricultural products of the season, but the continued lack of rain has retarded other farming operations and still further reduced the water supply, which is becoming alarmingly low in many sections. Some frosts occurred in the more northern and mountainous sections of the district but without material damage.

"Along the northern border, from the upper lakes to the Rocky Mountains, some frosts occurred and good rains prevailed in the vicinity of the Lakes, but over the Dakotas and eastern Montana it was generally dry, but the weather was otherwise favorable.

"West of the Rocky Mountains good rains occurred in the extreme Northwest and at a few points in other portions, but over most of this section it continued dry. The warm weather continued favorable for ripening and gathering fruits, &c., although some damage was reported from showers in southern California."

RUBBER EARNS $2,268,184.

This Is Net Profit and $1,355,743 Is Surplus After Dividends.

The Intercontinental Rubber Company has issued a report for the year ended July 31 which shows gross profits of $2,369,795 and expenses of $101,611, which left net profits of $2,268,184. Dividends totaling $912,441 were paid during the year, leaving a surplus of $1,355,743. This, with the previous surplus of $248,944, made a total surplus of $1,604,687. Against this was charged $1,050,000 transferred to the general reserve account, equal to the preferred stock retired during the year.

Preliminary expenses were charged off totaling $24,320, which left a profit and loss surplus of $530,366. The cash in bank on July 31 amounted to $1,181,518. At the annual meeting in Jersey City Charles H. Sabin, Vice President of the Mechanics and Metals Bank and Walter Dutton, Secretary of the company, were elected to the directorate, increasing the board from nine to eleven members.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The Consular and Trade Report will note the following trade opportunities abroad. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item referred to:

5,587. CAPITAL IN LUMBERING AND MINING ENTERPRISES.—An American Consul in the Far East reports that in a few months an official company is to be formed to engage in lumbering, and probably later in mining and other enterprises in that region. To provide the necessary funds for this company the Provisional Government wishes to raise a loan, and would like to secure the necessary capital from the United States if possible. This is a promising field for the investment of American capital, and the foothold for American trade which such investment would offer would be most valuable.

5,588. CHEMICALS, MILL SUPPLIES, TOOLS.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a communication from a business man in Canada stating that he is a manufacturers' agent and is anxious to get in touch with American manufacturers in the following lines: Chemicals, pulp and paper mill supplies, iron and steel, and tools.

5,589. IRON MINE CONCESSIONS.—A report from an American Consul in a Latin-American country states that the local Government has granted a concession to a mechanical engineer in his district for the exploitation of certain iron deposits in that region. The Government will grant free importation of all machinery, tools, and other elements necessary for the development and working of the mine. Interested parties may communicate with the individual in question, whose address is given in the report.

5,590. AUTOMATIC MACHINES.—A business man in a South American country who is coming to the United States in the near future to purchase automatic machines, such as penny-in-the-slot, gum-distributing, and similar machines, advises an American Consular officer that he would be glad to hear from American manufacturers of these articles previous to sailing. Correspondence and advertising matter should be in Spanish to receive attention.

5,591. DISINFECTION APPARATUS FOR RAILWAYS.—An American Consular officer in Latin America reports that a committee appointed by a local Government official has been studying for some time the best means to be adopted for disinfecting refrigerator cars and other agencies for the transportation of livestock and for preventing the spread of diseases of animals generally. While no definite resolution has yet been adopted, the various railways have been warned by the Government to keep their cars and ferryboats cleaner, and one official informs the Consular officer that he will be glad to receive catalogues, in Spanish, with weights and measures in the metric system, of all available methods of disinfection for railway cars, as well as of a method which, it is understood, has just been invented in the United States of dipping the car in which animals have been transported into a disinfecting bath.

5,592. STEEL SUPERSTRUCTURE OF BRIDGES.—Consul Frederic W. Goding of Montevideo has forwarded copies of call for tenders requiring the steel superstructure of a number of Government bridges in Uruguay. The Consul states that as the call is open to bidders until Jan. 17, 1911, there is ample time for American bridge builders to send in tenders, provided they employ an agent to supply the technical information. All bids will be subject to a strict compliance with the conditions and other provisions of the tender to be found open for inspection in the Secretaria-General of the Department of National Engineers at Montevideo.

5,593. GRAPHITE.—A Chinese business man, acting for a company which is about to open up its graphite deposits, advises an American Consul that he wishes to correspond with American manufacturing concerns that are in the market for purchases of graphite in considerable quantities. The company can supply an unlimited amount, but prefers to begin operations by small shipments. Samples of the mineral, which accompanied the report, can be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures.

FLOWERS STREWN WHERE SAILORS DIED

THE DROWNED LIST NOW 23

Sharp, the Coxswain, Included—Two Missing Sailors Turn Up—Ships Depart on Friday.

An impressive memorial service for the sailors who perished when the large sailing barge from the battleship New Hampshire swamped off the foot of West 157th Street on Saturday night was held yesterday afternoon on the New Hampshire's main deck and was watched by hundreds of New Yorkers who had gathered along Riverside Drive. Every flag in the fleet was at half mast when the strains of Chopin's Funeral March, played by the New Hampshire's band, sounded over the water and the crew marched from the rear of the vessel to their quarters forward.

Chaplain W. S. Cascard of the New Hampshire read the burial service, while every member of the crew and delegations from several other battleships in the river stood with bowed heads bared in the sunlight. In the centre of the deck was a great mound of flowers, the gift of the commanding officers of the fleet.

As the Chaplain finished reading the service and ended a short prayer there came the sound of a bugle call. Closely following it three volleys were fired over the side. Another bugle call drifted over the water, an dthe sailors, still with bared heads, filed slowly past the mound of flowers. Each man picked a flower as he passed and silently dropped it over the ship's side, where it was borne quickly away by the tide.

Except during the half hour the memorial service was on the work of dragging for the New Hampshire's dead and the work of trying to learn just how and why the accident occurred went on yesterday from sunrise to dusk. The Board of Inquiry, which began its sittings on board the Louisiana shortly after the disaster, had fifteen sailors before it yesterday. All had been in the sailing barge when it swamped. One of these men testified that Coxswain Morris Sharp of the New Hampshire was on the barge. Following this testimony it was announced that Sharp's name had been added to the list of probable dead.

A messenger was sent from the flagship Louisiana to call at the house in Manhattan where Sharp stayed while on shore leave. This messenger learned that Sharp departed on Saturday, dressed in his uniform. He left behind his citizen's clothing. It was also learned by the investigating board that Sharp's shore leave was to have expired on Monday night. This much having been established, it was decided to be highly improbable that he would ever be seen alive again.

Although no official statement from the board concerning its findings has been given out here yet, an official report is expected by the Navy Department in Washington some time this week. It is the general impression in the fleet that the investigating board will not find that the accident was due to any fault in the construction of the sailing barge, for at a recent test the boat held 100 men with a freeboard of one foot.

To-day's inquiry will probably wind up the investigation. On Friday the New Hampshire and her sister ships will leave this port. The hospital ship Solace will remain here while the search for the bodies of the drowned sailors goes on. The Marine Board of Coroners, composed of three officers of the fleet, will stay behind on board the Solace. This board will act in conjunction with the New York Coroner in identifying the bodies and arranging for their shipment home.

$10,000 GIFT TO A WARSHIP.

Citizens of Delaware Present a Silver Service to Their Namesake.

A massive silver service will be presented to-day to the United States battleship Delaware by the citizens of the State for which she was named. It cost approximately $10,000. On the big punch bowl are represented the State seal, the National seal, and the figures of Columbia and Liberty, all upheld by the National eagle.

Of the two waiters, the oval one represents ahe original Delaware, a ship of the line, while the round one pictures graphically the engagement between the Wasp and the Frolic in 1812. The borders are decorated with laurel, fern, and Delaware fruits, supported by dolphins.

The Colonial style was selected for the design, and the silversmith has made the service the handsomest ever presented to any battleship.

FIRE NEAR COLLEGE HALL.

The Manhattan Threatened as Woodworks Burn Across the Street.

The upper part of Harlem was lighted up late last night by a fire in the auxiliary plant of the Empire City Wood Working Company, on the southwest corner of 131st Street and Broadway, and three alarms were sent in to prevent a spread of the blaze to the near-by Manhattan College, on the northeast corner; the ten-story Broadway Storage Company, adjoining the wood-working plant; the elevated structure of the Subway, and three large tanks of the Consolidated Gas Company, at 131st Street and Riverside Drive.

The fire, which seemed to have started in the ground floor of the rear of the five-story brick building, was discovered by a passerby, who turned in an alarm. By the time the firemen reached the scene the blaze had shot up through the inflammable material stored in the plant, and had enveloped the whole building. A second and a third alarm was turned in, bringing Chief Croker from his headquarters in Great Jones Street.

He at once ordered the firemen to stretch eight lines of hose toward the gas tanks, with which they built a shielding wall of water between the fire and the gas-filled storers. The fire in the woodworking plant was soon extinguished. The building was saved, but a damage of $15,000 was suffered by the destruction of the material.

While hurrying to the fire with the reserves of the West 125th Street Station, Policeman Winkelman jumped on the running board of a passing automobile. A sudden swerve threw him off at Amsterdam and Manhattan Avenues, twisting his ankle and compelling him to return to the station.

TO CONTINUE STRAUS DEPOTS

Board of Health Plans to Supply Pasteurized Milk.

Straus's pasteurized milk is to become a permanent agency in saving the lives of babies. This became known yesterday. Mr. Straus has already agreed, as has been published, to keep open the milk depots where pasteurized milk could be obtained two months longer than he had intended, but Health Commissioner Lederle said yesterday that they would not be closed then, or at all, so far as any one knew.

While the discussion regarding the closing of the depots has been in progress Dr. Lederle has been quietly working out a plan for their indefinite continuance. This plan is that from now on the several Health Inspectors and nurses in the employ of the Health Department will conduct such a campaign of education among those most needing the purest milk as the city has not yet seen. This is designed to increase the demand among mothers for the pasteurized milk and to result in the saving of babies among the poor.

In addition, the leading charity and philanthropic organizations of the city have agreed to take up Mr. Straus's work and responsibility in meeting the cost of having the milk properly pasteurized. It is pretty generally understood among the leaders in the new movement, also, that Mr. Straus has every disposition to see the philanthropic organizations well started with their work before letting it fall too heavily on them.

The mass meeting under the auspices of these organizations whose representatives are in daily touch with the classes aided by Mr. Straus's philanthropy as a testimonial to him was announced yesterday [illegible] at Cooper Union.

DRISCOLL ANSWERS CRITICS.

Says He Hopes to Earn the Contempt of All Dishonest Tradesmen.

Commissioner Driscoll of the Bureau of Weights and Measures in an address befor the Men's League of the Third Church of Christ, Flatbush, last night replied to the criticisms that have been made that his pamphlet, "What Every Housewife Should Know," is a reflection upon the city's honest merchants. He also took up the reasons for his failure to attend the meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association on Monday, it having been said that he did not dare to be present.

"I have repeatedly said, and I reiterate it now, that I believe the duties of this bureau to be twofold," said Mr. Driscoll. "First to protect the general purchasing public against fraud on the part of the dishonest tradesmen, and second, to protect the honest merchant against dishonest competition.

"I know of no better way of protecting the honest merchant against dishonest competition than by laying bare to the housewife, who is in a large sense the purchasing agent for the family, the tricks of the dishonest tradesmen so that she may learn at once by observation whether her tradesmen be honest or dishonest, and if she discovers that she is dealing with a dishonest tradesman, needless to say, she will seek an honest store in which to make her purchases in the future.

"I am not afraid of honest criticism. I have no desire except to serve the people faithfully and to earn my salary as an honest public servant. If the honest grocers are displeased with my manner of conducting my office, I am sorry. But what the dishonest grocers may think of me is of small importance.

"I did not attend the meeting of the Retail Grocer's Association at Vienna Hall on Monday night because I would not permit the Mayor's office, of which my department is a branch, to be subjected to a threatening invitation. While the written formal invitation of the association was of a proper kind and I accepted it as such, I did not regard the many newspaper interviews in which various members of the association attempted to anticipate the ordeal which I would have to go through at that meeting as dignified, and I therefore had to refrain from being present.

"I repeat again, as I did in the letter declining the invitation of that organization, that there is little to be explained concerning which the laws of weights and measures affect the honesty of an honest dealer. All that the law requires is honesty, fair dealing and sixteen ounces to the pound. If trying to enforce this requirement of the law earns enemies for me in any trade, I shall never have cause to worry much. I desire the esteem of every honest citizen and I hope to earn by my efficiency the contempt of every dishonest merchant."

HOW TRACY & CO. GOT CASH

Cashier Says Brokers Sold Out Stock When Occasion Required.

The trial of William W. Tracy, head of the former brokerage firm of W. W. Tracy & Co. of 40 Wall Street, which failed on May 17, 1909, and who is charged with grand larceny, was continued before Justice O'Gorman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday. Tracy is charged with selling 600 shares of Goldfield Consolidated Mining stock belonging to Herman Kahle of 774 Forrest Avenue, the Bronx, for $5,200, and refusing to give the money to Kahle.

Three witnesses were called, Robert D. Covington, former partner of Tracy's; Russel Covington, formerly a cashier of the firm and a brother of Robert Covington, and Ferdinand E. Townsend, an expert accountant. They all gave evidence for the prosecution. Covington described irregular methods which, he said, the firm employed the last six months of its existence.

He said that everything that came into the office was regarded as cash for the firm's use, and that they used to sell out the stock box when they needed money. Covington said that Tracy & Co. were on the verge of bankruptcy for a year before they finally suspended business.

MISS ELKINS ARRIVES.

Refuses to Discuss New Phases of Her Reported Engagement to Abruzzi.

Miss Katherine Elkins and her two brothers arrived last night from Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Miss Elkins and her party were listed on the ship's register at their own request as "Mrs. Ellis and family." This was done, it was said, to avoid attracting the attention of her fellow passengers.

Miss Elkins did not deny her identity on the pier at Hoboken, but she refused to discuss the status of her reported engagement to the Duke of the Abruzzi in any way. She will go on to-day to her home in Elkins, West Va.

Last Summer there were repeated rumors that Miss Elkins and the Duke had met and were soon to marry. These were constantly denied by the Elkins family, and the expected marriage seems to be as far off as ever.

CAN'T PUT A BRIDGE ACROSS THE HUDSON

Dr. Kunz of Academy of Sciences Discloses a Report Showing Bedrock Lies Too Low.

ENGINEERS MADE BORINGS

Silt and Mud in River Bed to a Depth of 150 Feet Would Prevent Laying of Foundations—Tunnels Cheaper.

New York can never have a Hudson River Bridge, in the opinion of Dr. George F. Kunz, Chairman of the Geological Section of the New York Academy of Sciences and President of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society. And the reason is that nowhere below Storm King, up about West Point, is bed rock accessible to support the piers that would be necessary. A support in the middle of the river, or one about a third of the distance from each shore, is absolutely necessary to hold up a bridge, because at no point is the stream less than 3,900 feet across, which is too wide for a single span.

Dr. Kunz believes, however, that New York should not feel sorry. He thinks ten tunnels could be put under the river for the cost of one bridge.

For a number of years the advisability of building a bridge connecting New York City with the New Jersey shore has been considered. The Hudson River Commission, of which McDougal Hawkes is the President, has been long actively at work on the plans for a bridge. For a while Fifty-ninth Street was considered a possible point from which the bridge could be started from this side, but it was given up on account of the high cost of the land that would be needed for the Manhattan approach.

After many meetings 179th and 109th Streets were selected as the most advisable possible sites for the New York end of the proposed bridge. The river is 3,900 feet across at 179th Street and 4,400 feet across at 109th Street. On account of this width it was considered imperative to have either one support in the middle of the bridge or one about a third of the distance from each of the shores, and so Boller & Hedges, consulting engineers of New York, were asked to make borings in the bed of the river to see if a foundation for these piers could be located.

Speaking before the Geological Section of the New York Academy of Sciences at the American Museum of Natural History on Monday night, Dr. Kunz reported the result of the tests, which were made known to him through the courtesy of Mr. Hawkes. This is the report of the engineers, now made public for the first time:

"At the site of the 179th Street crossing ten borings were made. Commencing about 1,500 feet from the New York shore, the water being about 40 feet deep, four borings were put down about 100 feet apart, three of them up and down stream. These all resulted in silt and mud the full depth ordered. At their own intiative the contractors put one hole to 170 feet below the river bed, but with the same result. Then six borings were taken toward the Jersey shore, approximately 300 feet apart on the axis of the crossing, the water varying from 26 to 38 feet in depth, with the same result of silt and fine, sandy mud, saving with one exception, the last one at the Jersey shore, where rock was reached at 67 feet below the river bed, under 13 feet of water.

"The boring apparatus was then shifted to the site of the 109th Street crossing. At this point three borings were put down, at the pier headline on the New York side, where the water is 56 feet deep, and these borings fetched up on rock through mud at 82 feet below the river bed. We then moved the boring machine to mid-river as near as may be, and put down one hole 150 feet below the river bed, water being 38 feet deep, all in silt and sandy mud. We then put down three holes between mid-river and the New Jersey pier headline, approximately 300 feet apart. With the exception of last boring at about the pier headline, where rock was reached at 91 feet from the river bottom, under four feet of water, the other holes showed at full depth nothing but the same silt and sandy mud character of the Hudson River, under about 25 feet of water."

Dr. Kunz went on to say thta the Hudson River had been a deep arm of the sea in prehistoric times and that its depth in the pre-glacial period must have been about 750 feet. Since that time the deep bed of the river has filled up, so that to get down to a solid foundation anywhere in this neighborhood would be impossible, from a business point of view.

"Therefore the New Jersey Bridge Commission and others who have for the past twenty-five or thirty years hoped and dreamed that the Hudson River could be bridged are evidently doomed to disappointment," remarked Dr. Kunz.

"In the meantime, however, it is possible to tunnel the river, and tunnels have been built since the Bridge Commission was first organized. The cost of a bridge would be from ten to twenty times as much as the cost of a tunnel.

"There is no reason why we cannot have three or four tunnels large enough for traffic, and special tunnels for automobiles, as well as still others for railroads, which could with great ease be put, not at one disputed point, as the various advocates or objectors agreed upon, but at Fifty-ninth, Seventy-second, Eighty-sixth, Ninety-sixth, 110th, 130th, 137th, 157th, and 181st Streets.

"As the cost of a tunnel is only one-fifth to one-tenth that of a great bridge, and as ten tunnels would not cost more than one bridge, there is no reason why in the next three, five, or ten years we should not have a series of tunnels in place of a bridge."

PASSERBY HIT BY A BULLET.

Didn't Know He Was Shot Until He Got Home—In His Lung.

As James Buckley, a clerk, of 168 East 106th Street, was walking south on the east side of Park Avenue at 108th Street toward his home late last night he heard a shot behind him, and a little later felt a queer, sickening sensation. He did not know that he was shot, but continued to his home. There, upon removing his shirt, he found the back of it all stained with blood.

Buckley rushed out of the house and through the street till he found Policeman Mahr. The policeman called an ambulance from the Harlem Hospital. The ambulance surgeon upon examining Buckley said he had been shot in the back, the bullet penetrating his lung. Buckley was taken to the hospital, where he was found to be dangerously wounded, but with a good chance of recovery.

Upon making his report to the station Policeman Mahr found that two young women—Cora Murray of 11 West Sixty-third Street and Laura Baker of 15 West Sixty-third Street—had just been there and reported that as they walked north on Park Avenue at 110th Street they heard two shots from the direction of 109th Street, and almost felt the bullets as they whissed overhead. Looking back, they said they saw a gang of eight or nine young men whom they had just passed. One man in a light suit had his arm still raised, and they believed he must have fired the shot.

ASK FOR DIVIDENDS ON GRANBY STOCK

Stockholders at First Meeting Since the Slump Question President Longeloth.

NO CHANGE IN PROSPECTS

Ore Body Will Be Exhausted in Four Years—Annual Report Shows a Deficit—Langeloth Resigns.

Stockholders of the Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company, Limited, met yesterday for the first time since the slump in the stock last Spring. Granby had sold as high as 112 in January, and began to slump for no reason apparent to the stockholders, and in March, after an inspection of the property by several of the officers of the company and an engineer, dropped eighteen points in one day.

President Langeloth was bombarded with questions by the stockholders yesterday as to how the bad news about the mine's ore reserve had leaked out in advance of the official statement. He defended the imputation against the management by reiterating a statement he made at the time, that neither he nor any of the officers or Directors had bought or sold a share of the stock on the basis of the adverse report. President Langeloth is the largest shareholder in the company. He said that at the time of the break in the stock the report of the engineer with the inspecting party had not been completed, and that only the mine manager was acquainted with that part of it which referred to the tonnage of ore in sight. The manager had handed in his resignation at the time.

President Langeloth and several of the Directors resigned at yesterday's meeting, the President retiring because of his dislike of the criticism to which the management had been subjected.

The annual report showed a production of 22,750,111 pounds of copper during the year ended June 30, against 21,901,528 in the previous year, and gross earnings of $4,099,925, against $3,983,536 in 1909. Expenses increased from $3,302,402 to $3,534,978, leaving net profits at $564,946 against $681,134. After the payment of dividends and charges of $266,155 for depreciation, $60,674 for interest, and $202,435 discount on shares sold at 85, there was a deficit of $234,317 against last year's surplus of $243,507. This deducted from the previous surplus left a profit and loss surplus of $2,404,370.

Nearly thirty pages of the report are given to reports on the property by the company's superintendents and by Otto Sussman, an engineer employed to make a special report. These reports go fully innto the ore reserves which stirred up the stockholders last Spring. The ore reserves are sufficient to last less than four and one-half years as now laid out according to Dr. Sussman's report and a number of recommendations made for pushing exploration work in ground that has not yet been tapped. In conclusion the engineer says:

> You are in my opinion at present confronted with a situation where you have an up-to-date smelter of a capacity of 4,000 tons of ore per day, and a mine the life of which appears to be limited to a few years. Therefore, steps should be taken toward securing a further alimentation of your smelter from other sources. Your mine management has lately taken an option on some ground north of your properties in Phoenix, which ground is now being explored with diamond drills. This policy deserves your support, and further examination and exploration work of outside properties should be pursued vigorously. At the same time it appears advisable to me that you try to use part of your smelting capacity for customs ores.

The stockholders asked if it were not possible to declare a dividend, since the company had cash and copper on hand amounting to $900,000. President Langeloth said that, as the largest stockholder, he was opposed to any dividend at present.

The Directors who resigned were George Crawford Clark, George Crawford Clark, Jr., H. L. Higginson, and Payne Whitney. To succeed these and President Langeloth in the Directorate J. B. F. Herreshoff, G. W. Wooster, William Hamlin, E. R. Nichols, and Northrup Fowler were elected.

HOPE IN STEEL RAIL ORDER.

Trade Looks for Railroad Business Since Atlantic Coast Line Opens War.

After a period of stagnation lasting since the Spring months, the market for steel rails was enlivened yesterday by an order for 15,000 tons placed by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company with the United States Steel Corporation. The order will be executed by the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, a subsidiary of the Steel Corporation.

As rail orders go in normal times, the Atlantic Coast Line's order is a small one, even if it is supplemented, as was reported as a probability yesterday, by an additional order of 2,000 tons to be placed in a few days. Before the railroads began to shut down on expenditures for extensions and improvements, individual orders for 50,000 tons or more were not uncommon. It was not the size of the order which interested the trade yesterday, but the likelihood that it foreshadowed a return of railroad buying. It is usually at this season that the railroads begin to place orders for the following year's requirements.

Ten New Police Sergeants.

The ten vacancies for Sergeants made by the recent promotion of Police Commissioner Baker's squad of "shoofly" men to the grade of Lieutenant were filled yesterday by the promotion of these patrolmen: Nelson J. Grennison, West Forty-seventh Street Station; Michael J. Doyle, Traffic Squad B; John McGrath, Bath Beach; William M. Debbyn, Health Squad; William E. Quinn, Traffic Squad A; James G. Stevenson, Wakefield; Henry Freudenberg, West Thirtieth Street; Frederick Hollenbach, Fort Hamilton; Patrick Kiernan, Flushing, and John W. Colgan, Telegraph Bureau.
